BANDIT GANG TRAPPED?

Band of Six Men, One Wounded, Hunted in Woods Near Lawrence. Thousands Join in Search, Using Automobiles.

Search of a dense woods on the Lawrence road, near the Cold Spring brewery, is being made by Boston and Methuen police late this afternoon for six suspicious looking foreigners, one with his head swathed in bandages, who were seen to enter the woods from the road shortly after noon to-day.

This gang, the police believe, is unquestionably the bandit gang which shot and killed the two policemen in the Methuen woods Saturday night. Also, the police think, it may be the same gang which held up and robbed two women near Magnolia yesterday.

The foreigners were seen to enter the woods by John White of Methuen, who was driving past. He notified Chief Jones and the latter communicated with the Lawrence authorities by telephone. In an hour hundreds of searchers were on the ground.

Spurred on by Reward.

The searchers are spurred on by a reward for the capture of the Methuen bandits to be offered, to-night by the Methuen Board of Selectment.

While the search in that direction is on, armed policemen and citizens, in automobiles, are searching the entire North Shore for the assailants of Mrs. W. T. Cornell of New York and Mrs. L. B. Phillips of Rockville, Conn., who were held up within a short distance of each other in Magnolia yesterday.

Mrs. Cornell, after being dragged into the woods, was beaten, but Mrs. Phillips was saved by the timely arrival of her husband.

Trace Pair in Hyde Park.

Chief of Police Robert E. Grant of Hyde Park started out with a squad of ten patrolmen to search for two suspicious looking men seen in the woods between Hyde Park and this city. The two men are said to resemble the pair of bandits who took part in the Forest Hills shooting and who escaped from the police thines.

Captain Westcott with a squad of Jamaica Plain police, had already started for the woods to look for the men. With the Hyde Park force approaching from the other side the officers have high hopes of closing in on the pair.

The meeting of the Methuen Selectmen to-night will be attended by Chief of Police William Jones and the three selectmen of the town, who are Henry N. Hill, chairman; Samuel Rushton and Millard F. Emerson.

Chairman Hill said to-day:

"We will hold a special meeting to-night to lay out an even more active campaign against the bandits. A reward of $500 or $1,000 will be offered for capture of the bandits. We will back up the police in every particular. If Chief Jones needs more men we will swear in additional specials.

"We will have enough men out to interview all the residents anywhere near the scene of the killing of our two policemen. Everything will be done to apprehend the fugitives and to assist the police in preventing any more outbreaks."

A man who tallies almost identically with the description of the bandit who attacked Mrs. Cornell in Magnolia was seen to board an eastbound freight train, going toward Newburyport, at the Wenham and Hamilton station of the Boston & Maine at 9 a. m. to-day.

Police in every city and hamlet between Hamilton and Newburyport have been asked to be on the lookout. An armed posse of citizens and policemen has been raised in Newburyport.

Resembles Bandit.

The man sought is described as a foreigner, middle-aged and of stocky build. In sound respects he resembles one of the band of bandits which several weeks ago "shot up" Jamaica Plain.

If this suspect is captured, the police believe he may be able to throw some light upon the identity of the Methuen bandits who shot and killed two police men in the woods outside of Methuen, near Lawrence, early Sunday morning.

Three arrests were made in the Methuen bandit hunt to-day. Two suspects were taken at Billerica, but were released. They proved conclusively to the police that they knew nothing about the affair. Another suspect was taken at Jamaica Plain, but he, too, was released after being questioned.

Companies of State militia stand in readiness this afternoon to join in the search for both bandit gangs. Hundreds of additional citizens have volunteered themselves. To-night, like last night, thickets and forests in a dozen different sections will be searched, and police throughout all New England will be on the lookout for suspicious characters.

400 in One Posse.

Nearly 400 men—policemen and citizens—are scouring the towns and hamlets of the North Shore for the desperadoes who murdered Mrs. Cornell. As the hours pass the belief strengthens that one band may have done both deeds, and that all the men belong to the bandit gang which shot up Jamaica Plain on July 22.

There are dozens of things which, in the minds of the police, seem to confirm this suspicion. The Methuen band and the Jamaica Plain band pursued practically the same tactics in attacking their victims. They used the same kind of guns. All of them were foreigners.

The search to-day is being prosecuted most relentlessly in both Methuen and Magnolia, State and Boston and town police are working independently.

Boston will later divide between the two places the staff of inspectors who hunted the Jamaica Plain gang, and it is expected that the familiarity of these inspectors with the Edmund Gelman gang may aid materially in the double hunt.

The theory that the Jamaica Plain bandits were hiding in this vicinity, and were uncovered by their compatriots living near the woods, is borne out by the report of Medical Examiner of Essex County, Dr. J. F. Cronin, who declares that the policemen were killed by bullets, and were not beaten to death, as at first supposed.

Both men were so terribly clubbed and mutilated, however, that the gunshot wounds were not discernible on superficial examination. The agency of the shots, too, indicate that their murderers were accurate marksmen, like the Jamaica Plain gang, who used automatic Colt revolvers.

His belief that the best desperadoes are members of Hartnett's band is strengthened by the fact that McDermott and Emerson were shot by marksmen of the greatest skill. It is noteworthy, also, that the bullets which killed the officers passed clear through their bodies, indicating the use of high-power ammunition.

SOUTH END BASEBALL GROUNDS, Aug. 11.—Before closing up shop and leaving for their last pilgrimage around the circuit the Doves took the Cardinals on for a little canter at the regular distance prepared to make it three to their credit in the series.

The Cardinals, on the other hand, feeling more like champions than ballenders comer, because they showed some slugging propensities yesterday, were inclined to continue the same style of hitting unless the Doves' pitchers rushed and the custom of stopping it decisively.

It was dangerous business letting the Cardinals get the idea in their heads that they could smother the Doves if they showed signs of life as they got busy at the bat and were noisy and ready for a lively scrap.

Manager McCloskey did not think it necessary to utilize his young star Salles in order to get the game and break even in the check, but Cod Dirge Raymond and Eddie Karger, the port sider who pitched part of a game against the Doves and did well, to get their salary wings in waning time as they were to handle the job.

There was a lot of interest by the Hub fans over the appearance of President Dovey's new find, pitcher Tuckey from Meriden, and the youngster was accorded all the encouragement necessary for a new comer.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—A great cheering crowd turned out to-day to wish the Browns luck on their invasion of the East. For after to-day's game McAleer's pennant chasers leave for a three weeks' trip. Threatening weather attended to-day's frolic. Howell and Cicotte were carded to work on the slab, and Spencer and Criger behind the bat.

Only three points separate the Red Sox from the Athletics. If Boston wins to-day, while Philadelphia loses, the Red Sox will jump into fifth place, which they have been anxiously eyeing for some time.

Even if the Bostons fail to get the position before they start home, which happens to-night, they are confident that after a leave or an of game in the Hub they too will get into the place, and perhaps even go higher.

The Bostons are now sure of better than an even break in the West. If they defeat the Browns to-day it will put them away to the good. They won three out of four from Cleveland, and broke even in both Chicago and Detroit.

The Red Sox have easily made the best showing of any of the Eastern teams in the West. In fact they have been the only team to uphold the prestige of this section of the baseball map.

Yesterday's victory, 5 to 0, with Steele pitching against Dinneen, put the Bostons in a good mood for to-day's affair.

GYPSY BAND DRIVEN AWAY

The band of gypsies which was driven out of Newton yesterday drove into Dedham to-day and started to pitch camp on Centre street. They were ordered away by the police and started off toward Boston.

MAYOR OUT OF APPOINTMENT OF 10 SEALERS

The breach between Mayor Hibbard and the Republican organization was made wider to-day by the action of the Mayor, when he announced that he personally would act in the appointment of the ten deputy sealers of weights and measures, which is scheduled to be made by the mayor and aldermen.

There are 100 applicants, scratched off fifty of the number, and then sent the list of fifty that remained to Sealer of Weights and Measures Charles B. Woolley.

The Mayor's avowed reason for his action is put in these words: "Since Sealer Woolley is responsible for the conduct of his department I think that he should be allowed to select the men who will work in it. I will take no hand in the appointments."

The person given by some of the members of the Republican city organization is that the Mayor is afraid to pick the men. They say that he is trying to dodge the responsibility. The list of appointees which has been presented to the Board was to have been presented for confirmation at the meeting of Aldermen this afternoon, the meeting to be held to-morrow afternoon, the meeting having been called specially by the Mayor. Sealer Woolley says, however, that he will not have his list of acceptable applicants made out by that time.

POLICEMAN'S FATE IN HANDS OF SUPERIORS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., August 11.—Entertaining women in the captain's private office, attending a christening when he should have been on duty and eating his lunch at a boarding house when he should have been on duty, are some of the specific charges against Lieutenant John D. Hartnett of the Fifth Police Station, upon which the police commission gave the accused officer a hearing to-day.

The charges are preferred by Chief of Police Reed and are covered in the general complaint of "conduct unbecoming an officer." After hearing twenty-five witnesses in behalf of the charges, most of whom were officers under Hartnett, the commissioners adjourned the case until further adjournment and will announce their finding later.

QUEER BUG STINGS BRIDGEWATER MAN

BRIDGEWATER, Aug. 11.—Stung or attacked in the wrist by a worm of large size and hideous appearance, a resident of School street, much interested in amateur farming, is nursing a badly swollen arm. It is described as a hitherto unknown species in this section of the country. It is somewhat like the tomato worm. With red rings about the body, a collar of bristles back of the small head and a pool, or horn, an inch in height.

2 ROBBED OF $6,000 NO CLEWS

Woonsocket Emery of No. 540 Park street, Dorchester, clerk in the central postoffice, reported to the police to-day that he had been robbed of $3,800 in cash and negotiable paper, probably on his way home, last night.

Emery says he had the valuables in his pocket when he started home. He went from the postoffice by elevated to Dudley street terminal and thence to Park street, Dorchester, by surface car. When he arrived home he missed the money and papers. He thinks his pocket was picked in the elevated or surface car.

He had with him $600 in cash and a promissory note for $3,200, payable to him and signed by Mary Carter.

The police told Emery he might have lost the valuables, but Emery thinks that a pickpocket was responsible.

George E. French reported to the police to-day that checks and papers worth $1,381 had been stolen from him. The checks include one for $111 on the Bay State Trust Company and others on the Dedham National Bank, aggregating $126. The papers were two dividends on the Manhattan Street Railway Company of New York, negotiable for $875 each.

Some one broke into the office of the Dodge Motor Vehicle Company at No. 23 Irvington street during the night and rifled the cash drawer of $70.

THE WEATHER.

Fair to-day. Wednesday partly cloudy, probably with local showers. Light, fresh, variable winds.

High tide 10:22 a. m., 10:44 p. m.

Sun rises 4:47 a. m., sets 6:52 p. m.

INSPECTOR SUSPENDED FOR COLLAPSE

Mayor Hibbard to-day ordered the immediate suspension of Abraham T. Rogers, inspector of construction in the buildings department. Inspector Rogers was assigned to the Dorchester district, which included No. 37 Greenock street on which site the building collapsed last Thursday. Fourteen men narrowly escaped with their lives.

Yesterday Building Commissioner Arthur J. Everett made his official report of the collapse which he said was due to faulty underpinning and worthless foundations. The fact that the foundations were worthless is attributed to Rogers.

Rogers lives at No. 20 Robbwood avenue, Jamaica Plain. He was appointed inspector in 1898. Previously to that time he was employed in a minor capacity in the same department. His salary as inspector was $1,600 per year.

HOW DESPERADO SHOT AND ROBBED WEALTHY AGED WOMAN AT MAGNOLIA

Mrs. W. T. Cornell of New York strolls along shore road at Magnolia, her footsteps dogged by highwayman.

Assailed by thug as she passes clump of bushes, he firing revolver, bullet hitting her in neck and causing her to fall.

Bandit takes her watch and hand-bag containing $15, and attempts to tear valuable rings from her fingers.

Desperado drags her into bushes and flees as she begins to regain consciousness.

Two young women passing hear her faint struggles in the bushes and go to her assistance, giving the alarm.

THOUSANDS OUT IN HUNT FOR BANDITS WHO TERRORIZE COUNTRY.

revolvers, such as the Boston bandits employed in their reign of terror.

Fled to Methuen Section.

Inspector Wolf says that it has been the theory of the Boston and State police ever since the battle in the Forest Hills cemetery, in Boston, that the bandits may have been hiding near here, being fed and otherwise helped by partisans who knew them. It was in hunting down children thieves and house robbers that the two Methuen officers were ambushed.

He adds that on Friday afternoon two women carrying bundles were seen to come from the direction of the house where the relatives of the Manters woman, who has been sought as a leader of the Lett band, lived. They entered the woodsmen the scene of the double murder and came out empty-handed.

Two foreigners were seen talking with the women, and the men disappeared in the woods not far from where the Methuen policemen were found dead.

Along the country road in the scene of the local atrocity are many Syrians, Poles and other foreigners. It is declared by the police that some of these aliens have been shielding the thieves which have infested the neighborhood, and it is possible that the Manters woman and her sister, Elise, are hiding close by.

The funerals of both police officers will be held to-morrow. That of Patrolman Emerson will take place at Two o'clock Wednesday afternoon and Officer Melbermott will be buried in the morning.

Leontina Maureni in Lawrence.

The frightful character of the assault upon the two officers, the ruthless way in which they were shot to death, the absence of adequate motive for such a wanton crime, in addition to the other evidence in the case, strengthened the conviction in the minds of the police this afternoon that they had again to deal with the bandit gang who created a reign of terror in their two raids upon Jamaica Plain and their exploit laid upon Woburn.

A startling coincidence was reported in The Lettish girl, Leontina Maureni, for whom the police have sought so diligently and who was a companion of Guttman and the others in his band of miscellaneous thieves, went to Boston from Lawrence, near Methuen, the scene of the latest crime of the desperadoes. They have searched for her in that city, and reports have been convinced that she fled there after the Jamaica Plain raid.

POLICE GET CLUE IN MAGNOLIA ROBBERY

A definite clew was obtained this afternoon by the North Shore police officers who are at work trying to run down the hold-up men who shot and robbed Mrs. W. T. Cornell of New York, a wealthy guest of the fashionable Oceanside Hotel at Magnolia. As a result of this clew a search was begun for Charles Craig, twenty-one years old, who has worked at various places on the North Shore. Word is found he will be arrested as a suspect.

The hunt for Craig has not changed, however, the belief of the police that the shooting of Mrs. Cornell may have been done by some member of the Methuen gang of bandits.

Plain Methuen, and the police are determined to drive them away.

Chief of Police William H. Moffatt of Lowell has detailed men to-day to watch all the cars coming into the city and all suspicious looking individuals will be held up and put through a stiff examination.

Police Captain Hurley of the Cambridge police, after a conference with Chief Watson to-day, declared positively that the members of the Methuen band of bandits had passed through Cambridge on Friday or Saturday, supposedly on their way to Lawrence to visit friends.

This information, Hurley says, came to him Saturday. He planned a round-up, and the house of certain Lowell men watched, but without success. Captain Hurley is certain these men were members of the Jamaica Plain gang.

The home of Leontina Maureni, suspect of the Jamaica Plain band, is on May street, Lawrence, only a stone's throw from Methuen. It is the belief of Hurley that the bandits reached Lawrence, and, perhaps, being afraid to remain there over night, secreted themselves in the woods near Methuen.

The home of Leontina Maureni is less than an eighth of a mile from the scene where the Methuen officers were shot dead. The entire police department of Boston is under orders to-day to search for suspects and to arrest every suspect unable to give a satisfactory account of himself.

LAMPLIGHTERS' PAY CUT TO $2 BY RISING SUN

The Rising Sun Street Lighting Company to-day announced that it will pay lamplighters $2 in day each. The lamplighters rebel.

Beginning September 1 of this year, the Rising Sun Company will light the City of Boston on a contract running for one year. The contract provides that the lamplighters, 145 in number, be dropped from the city pay roll, where they were placed by former Mayor Fitzgerald at $2.25 a day each.

It had been understood by the city that the men would be retained in the employ of the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company. The lamplighters objected to this, and several labor leaders, headed by James H. Conier, labor representative of the Industrial Commission on Commerce and Industry, have asked the Mayor not to approve that part of the contract which provides for dropping the men from the city pay roll.

To-day's announcement that the men would be cut 25 cents a day each has made the outcry louder than ever. The contract was awarded by superintendent of Streets Guy C. Emerson. The Mayor has to approve it before it is operative.

WALKED FROM FRISCO TO HUB TO WIN $5000

Plodding sadly along on the last lap of his 3,000 mile journey, Sergeant John Walsh, who is walking from San Francisco to Boston in six months to win a wager of $5,000, passed through the Newtons into Brookline shortly before noon to-day, his goal but a few hours away.

"I am feeling fine and naturally pleased at accomplishing the feat. I will go at once to the Post Office to get the signature of the postmaster and my task is completed," said Walsh to an AMERICAN reporter who overtook him on the Brookline miles of his long jaunt.

Carrying an American flag in his hand and stepping briskly along, the remarkable pedestrian attracted attention all along the last few miles of his walk, and he was continually cheered by those who had learned in advance of his coming.

When he reaches the Boston postoffice he will have been eighty successive days on the road, during which time he has lost over fifty pounds in weight, but has not suffered one day of illness.

He is walking on a wager of $25,000 made by the officials of the Golden Gate A. A. of San Francisco and Colonel H. A. Warren, and the successful completion of the task means that Walsh will receive $5,000 as the share of the winner.

SUSPECTS THROUGH THIRD DEGREE AND THEN RELEASED

Early to-day Chief of Police Martin Conway of Billerica arrested two young men in the horsehead back of Talbot hall in that town on suspicion of being connected in some way with the killing of the Methuen policemen. They were able to satisfy Conway, however, that they had nothing to do with that affair, and they were released.

Later yesterday the two men called at the house of James Delmare in North Billerica and asked for permission to sleep in the barn. Mrs. Delmare was alone at the time and was greatly frightened. She told the men, however, that they could not sleep in the barn. They went away.

When her husband came home Mrs. Delmare told him of the two men, and he notified Chief Conway. The latter lost no time in getting after the pair, and finally rounded them up in the shed. They told Conway that they came from North Cohol, Vt., and were walking to Fall River in the hope of getting work. They were put through a pretty stiff examination by Conway, but they satisfied him that they were not the men wanted.

AUTO MAKE GUNS SOLD TO MEMBERS OF SECRET SOCIETY

LOWELL, Aug. 11.—Chief of Police Martin Conway of Billerica in authority for the statement that recently several dozen of the Colt automatic pistols have been sold to a secret society. The name of the society he does not recall.

Several months ago, when yeggs shot up Woburn, two of the gang were captured in Arlington. On these prisoners were found automatic magazine pistols similar to those that were used by the yeggs in Jamaica Plain, and which were undoubtedly used in the Methuen police last Saturday night. The Arlington police took the numbers of the weapons found on the prisoners and communicated with the Colt people. From them they learned that the weapons were part of a lot sold to a dealer in some Eastern city. Chief Conway is not sure, but thinks that the city is Boston.

The Arlington police questioned the firm, and there learned that a number of the weapons had been purchased by members of a secret society.

Since that time the town of Arlington has equipped all its police officers with the automatic pistol.

TOWNS DECLARE RELENTLESS WAR ON TRAMPS AND HOBOES

As a result of this shooting Saturday night the police of Chelmsford, Tyngsboro, Dracut, Tewksbury and Billerica have decided on a concerted and cooperative move to rid the towns and the neighborhoods of tramps and all undesirable characters. In Tewksbury alone the State tramps are many numerous than in any other section. They have been getting cunning and make no hesitation in stealing chickens and fruit and vegetables, until now the tramps were tolerated as a sort of necessary pest, but the police and the citizens are determined to drive them away.

BANDIT SUSPECT HELD BY POLICE AT JAMAICA PLAIN

A man giving the name of Francis O. Smith of Bristol, N. H., but thought to be a Lett, was arrested in Jamaica Plain to-day by a patrolman from Station 13 on charge of being a suspicious character.

The police are holding him at Jamaica Plain station. They have a theory that the man lodged in Cambridge in a house with Leontina Maureni, the Lettish woman who has been sought in connection with the Forest Hills shooting.

CHOATE AND ROOT WILL PRESIDE

SOMERVILLE TROLLEY CRASH; 2 GIRLS MAY DIE

Two persons were dangerously hurt, a dozen others were cut and bruised, and others still were thrown into panic in a crash of two Somerville trolley cars under the Boston & Maine railroad bridge in Washington street, Somerville, this morning.

Ella Dwyer, twenty, of No. 24½ Rossmore street, a telephone operator, and Elizabeth Gartland, twenty-two, of No. 38 Prospect street, a library clerk, have been unconscious since the accident and may die.

The crash occurred at 7:30 a. m. A Sullen square bound car from Union square, Somerville, jumped the tracks under the bridge when going at high speed. The front end made straight for the sidewalk. The rear end was tossed across the out bound tracks.

An out-bound car, fifty feet away and also going rapidly, crashed into the rear of the derailed car before the motorman could stop it. The crash was accompanied by a report which was heard several blocks away. It sounded like an explosion.

Passengers in both cars were thrown right and left and a scene of indescribable confusion followed. Many were cut by flying glass. Several were hurled through the open doors. The front end of one car and rear end of the other car were wrecked.

Policemen and citizens were quickly on the scene and extricated the injured from the mass of debris. Ambulances removed Miss Dwyer and Miss Gartland to their homes. Both suffered internal hemorrhages.

Others injured were able to walk to their homes.

TRIES SUICIDE BUT WOUND IS NOT FATAL

BROCKTON, Aug. 11.—Howard E. Youlden, 38 years old, who has been prominent as a Republican caucus and convention worker for some years, and who was employed until last Friday giving out work in the cutting department, shot himself in the right shoulder to-day in the office of Advertising Manager Frank L. Erskine, at the Administration Building of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company. Mr. Erskine is chairman of the Republican City Committee.

Youlden's wound is not fatal. The bullet was extracted at the Brockton Relief Hospital. No cause is assigned for his act.

It is said that Youlden went to the Administration Building to discuss with Mr. Erskine the likelihood of employment in the approaching campaign. Youlden was interested in the success of Congressman Loverring of the Fourteenth District. At 9 this morning he had an interview with the Hon. John S. Keat, Mayor of Brockton, whose name has been brought forward as a likely successor to Loverring in 1910.

'THIS COURT NO AGENCY FOR COLLECTIONS'

—Judge Murray

Declaring that his court was not to be used as a "collection agency," Judge M. J. Murray, in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day, refused to countenance a settlement out of court of the case of F. W. Davis, a young man arrested at Haverhill yesterday on a complaint by the United States Hotel.

Davis pleaded not guilty, and it was explained to the court that his friends were present, and that it had been arranged to pay the bill. The hotel folks, therefore, were represented to be desirous of withdrawing their complaint.

"The Municipal Criminal Court of Boston," declared Judge Murray, "is here for criminal business and cannot and will not be made a collection agency for hotels or private individuals. I want this fully understood. Mr. Clerk, I want this case to proceed, whether the hotel people want to prosecute or not."

Davis thereupon retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. His case was placed on file and so recorded.

NEW 'PHONE COMPANY OFFERS LOWER RATE

MORE UP-TO-DATE APPARATUS PROMISED BY METROPOLITAN CONCERN.

Lower rates than those charged by the present telephone monopoly, a more efficient service and a newer and more up-to-date apparatus for subscribers are benefits promised by the backers of the Metropolitan Home Telephone Company, whose bond for $50,000 has just been filed with the City Treasurer by the Metropolitan Company's president, A. G. Boerle, of Ohio.

Bernard M. Wolf, vice-president of the new company and one of its heaviest stockholders, said today that the company is ready to build right away, and will give the public better service at a much lower price.

"No Plans to Sell Out."

"We are going to give the public a surprise," continued Mr. Wolf. "We are not going to be sold to the Bell, as some people seem to think, and we are not making a bluff. We are actually going to build a telephone plant, one that will be as thoroughly equipped as modern science can make it.

"It will be a pleasant surprise to the people of Boston when they get our service. It will be exceptionally good compared to what they are getting now.

"I do not know that I want to say just how we will improve the service, but I will say that now there are too many stations in the first place. Then we are going to put in some instruments that are far ahead of those that the public has to put up with now. And I think that we can improve other details by which the public suffers.

"Our service will be on better and improved lines. All our conduits will be under ground. In fact, our plant will be up to date in every respect. And we are going to begin business right away."

System Automatic.

At the time of the light over the franchise one of the stockholders in the Metropolitan, in speaking of the advantages of the proposed new system, said:

"One of the first things to attract the notice of the public will be the difference in apparatus and mechanism. The prime difference in appearance will be in the indicator. This is a mechanical device so arranged that the number or party desired by the person using the telephone may be had by operating a pointer on a dial beneath the annunciator. The dial will contain numbers from 1 to 50 and, by revolving the pointer upon the indicator the desired number can be obtained. It is believed that this automatic operation will, in a great measure, do away with the central operating system and the 'hello girls.'

Five Cents a Message.

Alfred S. Hayes, attorney for the Metropolitan Home concern, said:

"The Metropolitan Home Telephone Company will not charge over five cents for messages between any subscribing districts and Boston proper, nor will it have any intention of making a charge higher than five cents, before the recent agitation which has resulted in a petition to the Telephone Commission with the object of forcing the present telephone monopoly to reduce its rates for such service from ten cents to five cents per message.

"The Metropolitan's schedule of rates must necessarily be much lower than the rates of the old company in order for it to meet the increasing necessity to make its large investment profitable.

To Accommodate 20,000.

Under the terms of its franchise, which calls for commencement of work before January 1, the Metropolitan Home Telephone company's system must be adequate for 20,000 subscribers by January 1, 1910. The franchise provides that telephones for the city at the rate of one for every 2,000 inhabitants and additional telephones at one-third discount from regular rates.

It is provided that the company shall not sell, lease to or merge with either the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company or any of its subsidiary companies, under forfeiture of its rights and property.

PRONE GRANT IS ILLEGAL—BABSON TO MAYOR HIBBARD

That the act of the Board of Aldermen in grant an "omnibus location" to the Metropolitan Home Telephone Company is illegal is the opinion of Corporation Counsel Babson in a communication to Mayor Hibbard today. The act of June, 1906, which granted the company its franchise, limited the rights and franchises to their acts, according to Mr. Babson.

As a result of this opinion the Mayor today announced that he will hold up any petitions from the Metropolitan for locations to open streets until the matter has been fully decided.

The plan of the new phone company to begin at once to lay conduits and other wire establish its business is thus held up, and a test case which may possibly go to the Supreme Court is expected.

The company has not yet asked for the street opening permit. They are privileged to do so by the filing of a $50,000 bond secured with the City Treasurer.

The Metropolitan Home Telephone Company secured from the Board of Aldermen in the closing days of the session of 1906 a franchise to establish a rival economy to the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company with all the rights, privileges, etc., of the latter corporation. Mayor Fitzgerald vetoed the order, but the Board passed the order, notwithstanding the veto, by a vote of eleven to four, on December 28, 1906.

By law, act of the 1903 body found all future Boards of Aldermen and this was ill-legal in the opinion of the corporation counsel.

Mayor Hibbard today says: "In view of Mr. Babson's opinion that grant of the franchise to the company was illegal, I will not grant permits to the company for opening streets, until the matter has been fully settled."

TYPOS TAKE UP REAL BUSINESS OF CONVENTION

Humanitarian Work Done By Printers' Home in Colorado Is Described.

VOTE ON AMENDMENTS

The convention of the International Typographical Union having disposed of the preliminary committee work, settled down to actual business when the second day's session was opened today at the Eliot building, with President James M. Lynch in the chair.

Henry Russell Wray, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Colorado Springs, Col., where the printers' home for sick and indigent members is located, made a touching telling of the humanitarian work the home is doing and the pronounced physical improvement which has been noted in many of the tuberculous inmates because of the favorable climate. He describes the work of the home and declared that it was an ideal institution and one of which every member could justly be proud.

First Real Discussion.

Delegate Thomas M. Nolan offered the first discussion of the session, when he moved that the convention reject the report of the committee on laws, disapproving of an amendment making the general vote on the amendments to the constitution by referendum, instead of by annual convention.

T. B. Spaine, of the Mailers, concurred with Nolan, and Harry Bebendahl, of Rochester, Ind., urged the convention to accept the report. Delegate Johnson, of San Francisco, advocated the report, and the chairman declared the report accepted, and on the vote the amending poll resulted in its acceptance, 111 to 45.

Other Reports Accepted.

The amendment of Thomas M. Nolan, calling for a convention every five years instead of annually, as at present, and fixing the first week in September as the time for the convention instead of the first week in August, was reported unfavorably by the committee on laws. After debate the convention accepted the report.

Delegate Howe of San Diego, Cal., urged that the conventions be held annually on the second week in September, and that the city in which the national headquarters were located. The amendment was lost. Other minor matters were reported upon by the committee on laws, and the convention accepting them.

During the afternoon session will be settled the disposition of proposed amendments to the constitution and general laws, James J. Freel, of New York, president of the International Brotherhood of Typers and Electrotypers' Union, extended the fraternal greetings of his organization to the convention. He spoke of the kindly feeling existing between the two organizations and referred to the fact that he had been a type-printer in the U. T. U. and a member of its executive council. He then paid tribute to the "peer" for their valiant fight for the eight-hour day, describing that contest as the greatest struggle in the labor history of the country.

On Nantasket Outing.

The convention adjourned at 12:30 on till to-morrow morning. This afternoon the delegates and their friends are guests of the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs. Miss Anna C. Wilson, the matron of the institution, and the government office at Washington, D. C., who is one of the trustees in charge of the Home, is sponsor for the gigantic fund which she hopes will be raised.

"HIS LETTERS TELL HOW FRED CRANE LOVED ME"

—ACTRESS VINA GORDON

DECLARES SHE WILL FIGHT HER BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT TO THE END.

HARTFORD, Ct., Aug. 11. Asked today if she were fully determined to bring her threatened suit for alleged breach of promise to marry against John Frederick Crane, the rich young Boston oil man, Miss Vina Mae Gordon of "A Knight for a Day" company, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"I am just as determined as ever. Do you think that I would have allowed all of this talk to go on and I not made up my mind? She continued her every step in pleading.

"I'm not in this for selfish reasons. I am bound to clear my name, to make that man pay for having made me notice a girl as he did. If you don't think that I'm in earnest you should have heard Whipple returning to Boston from Europe."

Will publish the BOSTON AMERICAN to publish a few other letters I received from Fred Crane while he and I were engaged. They tell you more about him he felt toward me than I can, for in them he tells it himself and he was a ready penman, as his 400 letters to me prove."

Some of Her "400 Letters."

Some of the letters which Miss Gordon says were written her by Mr. Crane follow:

"My Darling, my Vina:

The mail I got this morning is mighty disappointing. I realized how disappointed you must have been on Thursday, that you would see me. Now here are the proceedings to-day: This morning I settled up a phone call to go to court on the hearing with regard to being asked to attach the stock and mortgage which I, M. had.

"Then I went on saturday I signed as I can, and I would think you would be through.

"I did it very hard to sit here day after day. I go nowhere and do nothing. The only bright spot in the whole day is when I get your letter; and how I long to be with you and love you. Yes, when this matter is adjusted we will be together. If God and man will allow us to be. I hate to be the cause of disappointing you, Vina, but I was coming on coming over and I wrote, so that you would know it at once.

"Saturday I believe there is another hearing, but we will get through with this after awhile. Patience to the thing, but I am pretty well worn out with this matter. I love my Vina; I know that and I won't be happy until we are together again. I feel pretty much as you are feeling since I've left you and would be glad to know else that you are disappointed, and still it must be so for now.

"But I will be able to see more clearer after Saturday. If I gave was to writing you how I feel I would fill a world with a pretty fine letter. Remember that Fred loves you and is thinking of you constantly God-bye, my own true sweetheart, my Bunny. Lovingly yours,

FRED."

Would Leave Everything to Be With You.

This letter was sent from Boston.

"Vina Darling:

"There no I'll alone at 546 and trying to be happy. But be hard it be. Last night I staid at Brookline, but to-night I am by myself. The wind is blowing hard, the windows rattle and the sidewalks are filled with rain. It is lonesome. If you were here I would be happy. I would want for nothing more than to be here with me.

"How I miss you. It seems as if I would have to see you. I will prudence and leave everything to be with you. But I know that every letter I write you I've got to be fought out and settled. When that is done, then we can have some comfort; but I love you so and I want you.

"When I had you to meet I was happy. Now I can hardly keep from going to you. What a life it is. Well, I'm not my sweetheart, I wanted to talk with you so much to-night. I looked at your picture locker and thought of you. Good night; you know I am patient and cheerful. Have you good night. With every bit of my heart I am

"Your Fred."

"You're My Bunny and I Love You."

This letter was also dated Boston:

"My Vina:

"Your little letter is prized same to me as might and how I feel for my own little girl. You had a tough time and I know it, but let us look to the future. Hurry home for you? Why, God bless your darling little soul, I will take what the doctor orders and do all I can every minute, to help me get to you quicker. You are my Bunny every bit of and I love you. Keep your courage. I know you will soon be coming home. I had to write as long as I could be near you. Now I am going to bed, but I'm tired, but Monday I will write my Vina to-day. Good night now, Bunny. Loving-ly ever.

"Your own Fred."

"We Will Be Together."

Another of the letters from Boston reads:

"To My Own Vina:

"There was a hearing on the book case to-day, this waiting, and hours to hurt would have it, the Court called for another hearing for to-morrow, so I am not unable to come and see you as I had intended There is something coming up all the time. However, my Vina I will try and come to you or meet you somewhere just as soon as I can, and I would think you would be glad.

"Saturday I believe there is another hearing, but we will get through with this after awhile. Patience to the thing, but I am pretty well worn out with this matter. I love my Vina; I know that and I won't be happy until we are together again. I feel pretty much as you are feeling since I've left you and would be glad to know else that you are disappointed, and still it must be so for now.

"But I will be able to see more clearer after Saturday. If I gave was to writing you how I feel I would fill a world with a pretty fine letter. Remember that Fred loves you and is thinking of you constantly God-bye, my own true sweetheart, my Bunny. Lovingly yours,

FRED."

STOLE TO SAVE WIFE AND BABE

Declaring that he was forced to steal to save himself, wife and baby from starvation, Joseph Aguire, laborer, of No. 4 Camden street, was arraigned to-day before Judge Murray in the Municipal Criminal Court, charged with stealing after ware from a downtown store. In a pathetic tone, and with tears streaming down his cheeks, Aguire said he had tramped the streets of Boston day after day, looking for work, but without success. His wife and baby, he said, are as badly off as himself. The case was continued to permit of an investigation.

TWO HELD AS PERJURERS

John H. Rogers, eighteen, and James Cramer, twenty, both of Dorchester, were arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day for making a disturbance in Franklin Park. Rogers was also arraigned on the charge of assaulting a police officer recently. Two young Dorchester girls, Mary O'Brien and Agnes Gavin were witnesses for the defendant.

At the conclusion of the testimony Judge Brackett found Rogers guilty on two of the counts he had for perjury and directed the clerk to enter a fine of $100 on each charge. Rogers was sentenced to three months in jail for assault and the other cases filed. Rogers appealed and was held in $500 bail.

BIGGEST CAR STRIKE ON RECORD IMMINENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The greatest trolley car strike in the history of the country is threatened in New England unless the Providence roads settle with their striking employes.

This announcement was made by President William D. Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes. He said that if the Providence trouble is not speedily adjusted the men on all the New York, New Haven & Hartford lines would go out.

President Mahon, who is in New York to confer with officials of the National Civic Federation as to last resort in the settlement of the Providence strike, said regarding the critical nature of the situation:

"If the Providence trouble is not settled, the street railway men will tie up all the street car lines of the New Haven & Hartford Company in New England and states and affect the Port Chester road as well. Mount Vernon, Yonkers, Albany and other cities of the Civic Federation has already taken up the affair, which is now in the hands of members of the union at Providence.

"The men along the New Haven railroad system of the company have voted to strike as soon as the Providence local asks them to do so."

Many New England Lines.

Among the New York, New Haven & Hartford roads in Massachusetts affected by the recent anthracite report made by the Supreme Court, are the Old Colony, the Boston & Worcester & Southbridge, Worcester & Blackstone, Worcester & Fitchburg, Worcester & Webster, Webster & Brookfield, Stonington and New Milford, Danbury & Woonsocket roads. These roads are controlled directly or indirectly, according to New England reports, by the Mellen line directly or indirectly, holdings in these States being Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. All this gives as a result in the anthracite coal investigation proceedings due to the president efforts of the Civic Federation to secure a settlement of differences of Massachusetts line by sympathetic action, which cause in all 10,000 men to quit work.

The Consolidated road, in the New Haven system, is controlled, in gobbling up trolley lines in the New Haven trolley district required by reliance of law, have many hundreds of miles as well as total trackage and employ thousands of men. The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes is very strong in New England and a strike on the New Haven trolley lines would tie up suburban traffic to a great extent in the three States.

"The object of the Mellen road in gobbling up all the trolleys was to obtain a through trolley line from Boston to New York, so to speak, to avoid competitive freight and passenger freights in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. The combined capital of the trolley lines taken over by the New Haven road in defiance of the law amounted to about $6,000,000.

20,000 Union Employes.

In speaking of the possibility of a strike President Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Trolley men said:

"The men along the entire system have voted to strike if the Providence trouble is not settled. The fact that pigeon we cast will leave the trouble settled amicably is possible. We have an agreement with the Providence road. Men in the system, except the Providence system, which became a part of the system only recently, have been 100 of our members have been discharged, and the discharges are still going on. At first it was said the discharges were on account of complaints of various kinds, but when we saw the men here in Providence were told frankly the men were discharged for belonging to the union and no such men would be employed."

Vice-President A. T. Potter of the Rhode Island Company said the labor leaders when they called for a sympathetic strike on the Providence strike a month ago, that he would put men back at work if they would leave the union.

There are 20,000 union men, it is said, employed on the fifteen divisions of street railways controlled by the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and if they all went out, as is threatened, the strike, through a sympathetic action, might cause in all 100,000 men to quit work.

PROPOSE $500 DEATH BENEFIT FOR UNION MEMBERS

Several matters of great importance to the organization came up for consideration today at the second session of the International Printers' and Electrotypers' Union at the Revere House. One of these was the introduction of a resolution calling for the creation of a National mortuary fund. The organization now has a death benefit fund by which the beneficiaries of a dead member receive $50, but the resolution to-day calls for a National grant of $200 on the death of a member, by assessing each member fifty cents per year. The session was referred to a committee, as was also the resolution calling for the pay ment by the international body of the per capita tax of members of the Typographical Union instead of by their respective local unions.

An interesting feature of the meeting yesterday was the presentation of a gavel to President Lynch by John W. Hays, vice-president of the Franklin Printing & Typographical Union, in session at the Ford building.

The convention adjourned early in order to have the official photograph of the delegates taken. This will be taken at the State House at 12:30 the party left this noon for a visit to Nantasket Point and Nahant, where they will be treated to a fish dinner. Tonight a meeting of the women of the organization will hold a sing party at Grand Pier, which will be a social time of vocal entertainment and refreshments.

There will be no session of the convention to-morrow morning, as the delegates will spend the day as Providence under the escort of the Providence Union.

FIREBUGS PUT 200 IN PERIL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—An organized band of incendiaries early today set fire to a big double-decker tenements in the heart of Williamsburg, endangering the lives of nearly 200 men, women and children and creating a panic in neighboring buildings when the alarm spread. A man awakened by a neighbor in one of the lower floors discovered the fire. The fire in the other tenement was put out before it had gathered much headway.

ASK FOR NEW PAUPER BOAT

The city steamer John Howard, which plies between Atlantic avenue and the harbor islands, is in a dangerous condition and a new boat is needed immediately, according to the board of pauper trustees in a communication to Mayor Hibbard today. They ask for an appropriation of $50,000 for the purchase of a new steamer.

The Howard is thirty-three years old and has to be repaired constantly at an expense of $2,000 per year, according to the trustees.

The marriage is a romance of the hotels Mr. Norton is regarded as an exceedingly lucky man, for Mrs. Brokaske was considered one of the prizes in the matrimonial market, her wealth and beauty combined having proved a bait that attracted many admirers.

BOSTON ELEVATED

Service the Best in Any Great City in the United States

The Report of Samuel H. Barker, Financial Editor of the North American of Philadelphia

The North American says:

"In order to give the people the facts, The North American sent its financial editor, Samuel H. Barker, to the principal cities of the country. His report of conditions is accurate, impartial and complete."

Mr. Barker's report on the Boston system, dated August 3 begins as follows:

"Without question THE BOSTON ELECTRIC RAILWAY SYSTEM RANKS SO HIGH ON ITS MERITS AS TO BE ALMOST LONELY IN ITS SUPERIORITY. This holds true in important respects.

"First of all, it is safely within the fact to state that the combined street, elevated and subway service provided in Boston and its suburbs is far and away the best that is afforded in any great city in the United States. This feature concerns the great body of the people.

"Next, there is not ONE CENT OF WATER in the capitalization of the BOSTON ELEVATED RAILWAY COMPANY system. On the contrary, securities sold by this corporation and the leased West End Street Railway Company have realized in cash, over and above their face value, an aggregate net premium of $4,292,668. None of this cash is represented in capitalization, but is all found in property. This financing has made Boston electric railway securities safe and sure investments.

"Again, besides paying its men good wages on an advancing scale, the Boston Elevated Railway Company gives a $15 reward at the end of each year to every employee who has performed faithful service, last year paying out over $55,000 on this account, and also pensions, at $25 per month, to men who have become incapacitated or grown too old to work. All this concerns the employees and their families.

"In no city in the United States are traffic conditions more exacting than in Boston, where the attractiveness of the outlying sections and the unusual transportation facilities afforded have combined to separate homes from business, with the result that there is enormous and concentrated travel in and out of the central district of the city.

"With this the basic situation, and a difficult one in many respects, it is not too much to say that THE TRANSPORTATION SERVICE GIVEN TO BOSTON IS SUPERIOR TO THAT AFFORDED IN ANY OTHER BIG CITY."

GASTON NOW FOR BRYAN, AND FOR HIS BANK

Won't Try for Governorship; Draper is a Director in the Shawmut.

HE THINKS VAHEY WILL DO

Colonel William A. Gaston says he will vote for for William J. Bryan for President this time. He admits that he did not vote for him twelve years ago but marked his ballot for Palmer and Buckner of the bolting gold Democratic ticket.

"Many leading Democrats" have asked him to run again for Governor, or Colonel Gaston says, but he has refused, as he thinks his first duty is to his bank and its depositors, and, incidentally, to its directors.

Lieutenant-Governor Draper is one of the directors of the National Shawmut Bank, of which Colonel Gaston is the president. Mr. Draper is booked for the Republican nomination for Governor. Colonel Gaston thinks Senator James H. Vahey will be the Democratic nominee for Governor and he is satisfied to let him have it.

When Colonel Gaston was personally conducting his campaign for Governor he was a pretty grim proposition, but since he ceased being a candidate he has developed into a humorist. His latest contribution to the funny columns of the newspapers is the statement that he "believes the Democrats have a good chance of electing the Governor this Fall, notwithstanding Lieutenant-Governor Draper is a fellow director of his bank."

James W. Synan of Pittsfield, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, has come to the city. He has called on many prominent Democrats, and he intends to see other big Democrats before to-morrow afternoon, when his state committee will meet. The Boston Democrats have been saying hard things about Synan's ability as a leader. Some of them speak of him as the "former chairman."

Others call him "Rube" Synan.

Chairman Synan will create an advisory committee. It is contended by the Boston politicians that he should first prove there is work enough for the regular committee to do.

THREE WEEKS OF ALICE IN WONDERLAND

Brilliant Event Now Being Rehearsed at Big Outdoor Park Resort.

"Alice in Wonderland," for three weeks in the great Wonderland Park Carnival, from September 7 to 20, when the park season closes, and the great spectacle is now being arranged.

Manager Higgins will expend $5,000 presenting "Alice in Wonderland" and make it as realistic as the book from which it was adapted.

Little Alice has been selected and is rehearsing every day with seventy-five beautiful girls. A huge structure will be erected in the middle of the park for this brilliant event, which will be given free each evening.

Wonderland Park is filled with members of the Sunday American Outing Club today, and fully 15,000 will have visited the park for the two days with free tickets for admission to Love's Journey, the Wild West show, Merry-go-Round, Velvet Coaster and Miniature Railway.

Manager Higgins has gone West for new attractions for this and next season. Before leaving he said:

"Wonderland Park has done much better this season than we expected. Business has steadily increased from the opening week."

Big excursions from all over New England will visit Wonderland Park every day this week, and no less than thirty are booked during the month.

YOUTHS CAUGHT WITH BUNDLE OF SILVERWARE

Sergeant McCluskey and Patrolman T. H. Murphy of East Dedham street station early to-day arrested two young men, one carrying a bundle, whom they found entering an Appleton street lodging house. The bundle contained a miscellaneous collection of silver.

The prisoners gave the names of Harry Sturn and Herbert Seidman, both nineteen years old. They were charged with larceny from persons unknown.

Yesterday Assistant Paying Teller Thomas Kemp of the Second National Bank in the Sears building reported to police headquarters that his residence in Dorchester had been entered and that $1,000 worth of silver had been stolen. Kemp has been notified to call at headquarters and see if the silver found on the Appleton street pair belongs to him.

AUTO EXPLODES; KILL 2 WOMEN

PAINESVILLE O., Aug. 11 – Mrs. Mary Rowden, sixty-five years of age, and Mrs. Rose Beckwith, forty-three years of age, were instantly killed, Fred Beckwith, forty-five years old, perhaps fatally injured, and Beadle Beckwith, sixteen years, his daughter, badly bruised and burned by the explosion of a steam automobile at the foot of Hickey hill, about eight miles from Painesville.

CHELSEA PRIEST GETS $500 PURSE

In St. Ross Church, Chelsea, last night, Rev. Father Walter A. Fegan, who for the past eight years has been assistant at that church, was presented with a purse of $500 by the teachers of the Sunday School. Father Fegan was transferred some two months since to the St. Charles Church of Malden.

TEN THOUSAND OUTING CLUB MEMBERS THRONG TO NANTASKET BEACH PARK

Group of Youths Enjoying the Excitement of a Visit to the "Human Roulette Wheel" at Paragon Park.

Ten thousand members of the Sunday American Outing Club visited Paragon Park yesterday and to-day with fifty-five cents' worth of free tickets for park amusements, paid for added attractions, filled the Palm Garden and thronged the board walk to witness Manager Dodge's wonderful out door shows, including the always brilliant balloon and parachute performances of Professor Bonnette.

Bonnette's particular feat this week is to soar into the clouds with the Lowande Circus gander, Demosthenes, and let the fowl go at a great height to wing its way back down to its circus quarters. Demosthenes never took such flights before in its life, but the wings Mother Nature gave him are better than any parachute, and he knows full well how to use them.

The bird alights on the board walk and squawks in triumph, while Bonette, the author of the mischief, struggles down to earth by the aid of artificial wings—two parachutes—and takes more chances in the landing.

Three park singers combine with the bands and orchestras to enliven the park this week, the Palm Garden is almost always filled to overflowing, and the big standing shows report a much better business than they had anticipated.

Later in the week announcement will be made of a new set of park free tickets to be given with next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

ARNOLD LAWSON IN AUTO CRASH

QUINCY, Aug. 11—Arnold Lawson, son of Thomas W. Lawson, narrowly escaped death when a big touring car in which he was riding crashed into a heavy draw loaded with drain pipe.

The young man landed in a clump of bushes, which broke his fall.

Lawson was sitting beside his chauffeur, William Jaycock, and saw the heavy team taking up most of the road ahead. He paid no attention until the automobile drew so near that it seemed impossible to avoid a collision.

Lawson then looked at his chauffeur and saw that his head had fallen down limply and that he had fainted. He reached over and tried to direct the big machine, but it was too late. Mr. Lawson was hurled to one side of the road and Jaycock to the other. The chauffeur suffered a severe gash over his eye.

BRADLEY CASE IS CONTINUED

Patrick H. Bradley of Charlestown, former Representative and Common Councilman from Ward 6, pleaded not guilty in the Charlestown District Court to-day to a technical charge of larceny of $20 from John C. Sullivan, the liquor dealer on Main street, Charlestown, by means of a forged check.

The complaint was that Bradley gave Sullivan a check, made payable to Sullivan, drawn on the Third National Bank of Boston, and purporting to be signed by John J. Higgins. The check was dated May 19, and has since been returned as a forgery of Higgins's name. The case was continued till to-morrow. Bradley was held in $100 bail.

LOEB WRONG SAYS ETHEL

MANCHESTER, Aug. 11—Although Secretary Loeb at Oyster Bay had hinted that yesterday was the birthday of Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the President's daughter herself denied it. "To-day is not my birthday," she declared emphatically. "It is not many days hence, however," she added with a smile.

Miss Roosevelt enjoyed a strenuous day, although she insisted upon quiet and exclusiveness. She declined the invitation of the Manchester Yacht Club to watch the pageant from their parlors, and very few of the townspeople knew that she was present in the Mauan yacht not far from Smith's Point.

EDISON GIVES FARMAN TIP ON AIRSHIP

"Wizard" Draws Diagram of Aeroplane For Noted French Aviator.

BOTH ENTHUSE OVER PLAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—Any one listening outside of Thomas A. Edison's private office at Orange, N. J., when he was in close conversation with Henri Farman, master of flying machines, would hardly have obtained much of value to science. Both men talked too rapidly.

A week ago Mr. Edison sent to Mr. Farman, through an agent of the Aero Club, a pencilled sketch of a thing meant to be a machine which Mr. Edison said would fly. It was a conglomerate mass of lines, and each line conveyed a theory.

Mr. Farman's trained eye can down the lines and he shouted with ecstasy: "Here is a new factory dealing with the navigation of the air!"

When Mr. Farman visited Mr. Edison at Orange he expressed his delight that the "wizard" was to work and to say just the right word to him an improvement in aerial machines.

Talk Over Airship Plan.

"Mr. Farman, I am glad to meet you," said Mr. Edison, as Mr. and Mrs. Farman, accompanied by a member of the Aero Club, who acted as guide, in Mr. Edison's shop, arrived.

"I have been interested in flying machines," said the inventor, "in fact, I sent to you my idea of a machine which would lift itself from the ground and fly in whatsoever direction the operator willed.

Understand, Mr. Farman, this is only an idea. I have no disposition to build a machine, neither have I the time. But it certainly looks well on paper, does it not?" Mr. Farman agreed with great enthusiasm.

"Once upon a time," continued Edison, "I gave flying machines a great deal of thought. But my investigation has been along the line of the chemics.

Promises Flight to Coast.

"I do not believe in the dirigible balloon. I have an idea that the plane of a heli-kopteru machine, which will rise in a vertical line from the ground, must be a part of the flying ship of the future. We will fly, all right, but it will be in the heavier-than-air machines when we come down to a practical basis.

"You go ahead and demonstrate on my theories, and when you have perfected a craft that is perfectly safe I will take a trip to San Francisco with you."

At the Aero Hotel, whither Mr. Farman returned from his visit to Mr. Edison, there was uncertainty as to the aeronaut's future course.

HAIR HUMBUGS

How many readers of this paper have been humbugged with either worthless or dangerous preparations for the hair?

How many women have spent good dollars for secret stuff in a bottle that didn't make their hair grow and didn't make it lustrous and beautiful?

You bald men who tried these fake mixtures—how many of you have one more hair now than you had before you used them?

There is just one thing needed in treating the hair more than any other thing, and that is cleanliness.

You don't wash out of your scalp and hair the dandruff, dirt, dust and disease germs as fast as they appear.

Scales form on your head, the pores become clogged, and the first thing you know the hair falls out.

Sooner or later baldness is bound to result.

Plain soap won't do, because plain soap leaves your hair and scalp dry, and that is bad.

Use Birt's Head Wash and, honestly, your head will feel cleaner and be cleaner than ever before in your life.

Your hair will be silky and lustrous, and you will wonder what's in Birt's Head Wash to make it do so much good.

And the best of it is we tell you.

Here are the ingredients:

Refined Soap, Glycerin, White of Eggs, Cochin Cocoanut Oil and Salicylic Acid.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of this formula.

And if he says it is all right go ahead, try it, and you will find every word printed here is true.

SPECIAL NOTICE—If your druggist does not have Birt's Head Wash in stock, be sure and ask him to get a package of it for you from his wholesaler. Every wholesale druggist in Boston and Providence has it on sale, and any retail druggist can get a supply quickly by telephoning. Don't take anything but Birt's Head Wash, because it is exactly the thing that nearly everybody's head needs.

THE DOCTOR says "drink beer" to the weak and the convalescent. To those who need strength—need a food and a tonic. If it is good for them, isn't it good for you?

The virtue of beer does not lie in the alcohol. There is only 3½ per cent. of that.

It lies in the malted barley—a digested food. And in the hops—a tonic and an aid to sleep.

It lies, too, in the fact that the drinking of beer flushes the system of waste. So would water, of course, if one drank enough of it. But you don't drink water like beer.

When beer is pure there is nothing more healthful. And Schlitz beer is pure. It brings no after-effects, no biliousness.

But better go without beer than to drink the wrong beer. That is why the Doctor generally says "Drink Schlitz."

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
Common beer is sometimes substituted for Schlitz.
To avoid being imposed upon, see that the cork or crown is branded Schlitz.

BATTLE TO GET THAW INTO PENNSYLVANIA

Clash Will Come if Jerome Tries to Keep Him in New York.

O'MARA MAY BE DEPOSED.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 11.—That Roger O'Mara may be deposed as receiver in the bankruptcy proceedings of Harry K. Thaw and superseded by a trustee was will to be named by New York creditors is the latest legal phase of a controversy that promises to involve the Federal authorities of Pittsburg in a dispute with the State authorities of New York.

The clash will come, it is said, if District Attorney Jerome or any other person of the Empire State attempts to prevent Thaw from coming to Pittsburg to attend the meeting of creditors.

Formal notice of contest against the claims of Harry Kendall Thaw's creditors has been filed by former Governor William A. Stone with W. R. Blair, referee in bankruptcy for Allegheny County. All claims excepting those of Mrs. William Thaw and Roger O'Mara are contested, and notice is also served on the referee that Thaw will contest any claim which Lawyer Jerry O'Reilly of New York may make.

Criminal Proceedings Threatened.

Receiver O'Mara intimates that as receiver for Thaw he can bring active criminal proceedings against any person whom he finds has misappropriated funds belonging to Thaw.

Dan O'Reilly expects to go to court with a move to block the proceedings brought in Pittsburg to have Thaw adjudged a bankrupt. Mr. O'Reilly admitted that he would probably ask the Supreme Court for an order to have a commission appointed to take charge of Thaw's person and property.

If successful in this Mr. O'Reilly proposes asking the court for an order to take testimony on the question of the fee Thaw ought to pay him for his services in the second trial for the murder of Stanford White.

O'Reilly Wants Over $5,000.

Thaw says O'Reilly has demanded $5,000 extra for his services, but he disputes the claim. O'Reilly declares he has not received a cent for the second trial, that he has not asked for $5,000 and that his actual claim will be much higher than that.

"The bankruptcy proceedings are clearly illegal, the bankruptcy law plainly stating that a lunatic cannot go into bankruptcy," said O'Reilly today.

O'Reilly declares that if Thaw once got into Pennsylvania he could never return to New York, but said he was confident no Federal judge would order him into Pennsylvania.

JEWISH GIRL TO WED ITALIAN FATHER YIELDS

LYNN, Aug. 11.—Rosie Miller, the pretty young Jewish girl for whom her sweetheart, Louis Ledi, an Italian, changed his religion from Roman Catholic to Hebrew in order to gain her consent to marry him, returned here from her father's home in Webster to-day, declaring that she had overcome her father's objections and the marriage would take place without delay.

Yesterday Miss Miller was to have appeared in court to answer the charge of being a stubborn child, brought by her father. Both defaulted and the case was dropped for want of prosecution. In the meantime the father had talked with the prospective son-in-law, and Miss Miller declared that she was perfectly satisfied with the situation.

"We will be married just as soon as we can get ready," declared the pretty young Jewish girl to a reporter from the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day. "Father has seen Louis and is satisfied that he will make a good husband for me. Now that father is willing we will be married at once. It would make much difference if he did object, as I am twenty-three years old and will marry whom I chose."

ABOVE THE CLOUDS

Aeronauts will easily locate the big villages without roof signs, even in foggy weather.

By MERLE JOHNSON

The National Aero Association is sending out from Columbia letters to the Mayors of all cities of large population in the United States and Canada, asking that the names of their towns be painted on the roofs in their localities. These signs are desired as a guide to balloonists.

BASS POINT MAN STABBED

Michael Proctor, a "slide man" in the serving room of the Bass Point House, Bass Point, was stabbed twice in the abdomen with a penknife early to-day.

John L. Vincent, of New Haven, who had been stopping at the home last evening, was arrested on a charge of assault on Proctor with a dangerous weapon. Vincent was taken to Nahant Police Station for a hearing this afternoon.

The men became involved in a quarrel, it is said, and the next known was a scream from Proctor that he had been stabbed.

GET BODY OF DROWNED MAN

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Aug. 11.—Early to-day the body of William J. Carroll, thirty-one, of No. 61 Pleasant street, this city, who was drowned last Saturday, while out canoeing above at Lake Massapoag, was recovered by a cottager living nearby. Carroll leaves a wife who has been prostrated by the shock.

Authorities here started to-day grappling for the bodies of the two unknown men, who were drowned yesterday afternoon in Lake Massapoag. The two men were out in a rowboat, when the boat overturned near a dangerous hole.

GIRL HELD IN SHOOTING CASE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 11.—Addie L. Gage of Bedford, who was arrested on July 27, charged with the shooting of Orrin Graves at her home in Bedford was arraigned to-day in the office of County Solicitor A. F. Bolyert in this city on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

She pleaded not guilty and waived examination. She was remanded to jail without bail. To-morrow an application will be made to Judge Robert M. Wallace of Henniker to have bail be fixed.

GLIDDEN IN CLOUD TRIP

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 11.—Following a banquet given to Charles J. Glidden, the automobile and balloon enthusiast, several business and professional men, of this city, are preparing to organize an Aero Club here. A meeting of those interested will be called at an early date.

A committee from the Springfield Board of Trade is interested in the project. It is argued that this city should be a station point on the proposed aerial navigation line from Boston to New York. Mr. Glidden makes an ascent at 5 o'clock this afternoon in his new balloon "Boston."

ARCHBISHOP FARLEY INDISPOSED IN ROME

ROME, Aug. 11.—Mgr. Farley, Archbishop of New York, is slightly indisposed owing to stomach trouble due to change in climate and food. The physician who attends the Archbishop of New York, who is now in Rome, visited Mgr. Farley last evening, but found that his ailment was not serious. However, he advised the Archbishop to go North to a cooler climate as soon as possible.

TRAILED BY BOY; HELD IN $500 FOR BREAK

Trailed all the way from Fifty street, East Cambridge, to the South End in Boston by a little boy who saw him enter and leave a house on that street and who told a policeman of Station 4 in Boston of the fact, Joseph T. Camara to-day appeared in the District Court in Cambridge charged with breaking and entering the house in which he was trailed and with stealing $500 in cash and jewelry.

Camara is thirty-two years old and lives at No. 30 Spring street, East Cambridge. He is accused of entering the house of John Linn, No. 153 Fifth street, in search of a false key, and taking $500 in cash, a gold watch and a small sum of money. The little boy who saw him, whose name the police do not know, followed Camara when he came out all the way to Boston and then pointed him out to a policeman who arrested him. Camara was brought to Cambridge by Inspector John W. Dee-han.

ROYAL KISSES AS KAISER AND EDWARD MEET

KRONBERG, Aug. 11.—King Edward arrived here this morning and was met by the Kaiser at the railway station.

The meeting was most cordial. The two monarchs kissed each other on the cheek several times.

Afterward they entered an open automobile, and amid the continuous cheers of the crowds along the route drove to the castle. The streets were gayly decorated, and instead of being lined with troops, as usual, were lined with school children.

2 DEAD, MANY HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

GLENDIVE, Mont., Aug. 11.—Two men were killed, one person hurt so badly that he will die, and upward of a score badly injured as the result of a bad wreck when Northern Pacific train No. 2, the North Coast Limited, ran into a burned bridge. Fireman A. B. Matthews and an unknown tramp were killed outright.

MRS. DRESSER GETS DIVORCE FOR DESERTION

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Daniel Lolley Dresser, who last February established a residence in Sioux Falls, to-day was granted an absolute divorce from Daniel Dresser, president of the shipbuilding trust and of the Trust Company of the Republic, New York. The divorce was granted by Judge Frank B. Smith of Mitchell, sitting in the State Circuit Court in place of Judge Joseph W. Jones, the regular judge, who is on a trip to Europe.

The decree was granted Mrs. Dresser on the ground of desertion. The question of alimony did not enter into the case, so far as the court records discloses, this feature evidently having been adjusted out of court.

Mrs. Dresser has not announced her plans. She has lived quietly since taking up her residence in Sioux Falls and not until nearly four months after she arrived in the city was her presence announced.

CANADIAN-AMERICANS IN CONVENTION

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 11.—The eighth annual convention of the Canada-American Association opened here to-day. Delegates from 225 chapters, with a membership of about 14,000 persons, are present. The convention opened with a solemn high mass at St. Charles Bromore's Church, Rev. Eugene Lassard being the celebrant. A sermon was preached by Rev. Camille Zilard of St. Edward's Church.

At the conclusion of the religious services the delegates adjourned to St. Jo-seph Hall, where addresses were made by Governor Aldrich, Mayor Patrick T. Mc'arthy, Supreme President T. G. Bizon of Manchester, N. H., and others.

About 1,000 delegates and ladies are attending the convention.

MADE A FATAL MISTAKE.

WORCESTER, Aug. 11.—John Murray, seventy-five years old, took a dose of wash-ing mixture by mistake at his boarding place, No. 14 Assomet street, and is dead as a result. He was alone at the time, and went to the closet for his medicine bottle. He took a bottle containing a solution of ammonia, salts of tartar and potash.

At Last Sandy Got His

He Was a Bold Masher, If You'd Take His Word for It

By KENNETT HARRIS

THERE were three of them on the park bench. They were smoking cigarettes and conversing in tones whose gruffness occasionally flew off into a squeak. Occasionally they playfully knocked off each others hats and laughed boisterously.

A girl whose white dress was still at the shoe-top height approached them, and the three talked with increased expectation.

"Here's Sandy's chance," said one of the youths.

He who was unmistakably "Sandy" winked his appreciation of the fact. "Hello, sweetness," he called to the girl. "Ain't you tired o' walking? Come and sit down by me."

The girl quickened her pace and passed them, pursued by delighted guffaws. Sandy seemed pleased with himself.

"Ain't he got a nerve?" said one of the other boys admiringly.

"He'll get pinched the first thing he knows, for being a masher," said the other.

"What'll you bet she won't come back with a cop?"

Ready to Take Chances

"That's all right about the cop," said Sandy, complacently. "I'll take chances on that any old time. I betcher she'd have come if you hadn't been with me. What 'er want to bet I can't follow her up and get solid? Bet the ice cream? No, you kids spend."

"You'd get pinched," reiterated the boy next to him.

"Pinched, nothin'," said Sandy, severely. "I've never been pinched for that yet. I don't never expect to be, either. I'm a feller knows you he don't have no trouble at all. I kinda like to have a little his nerve with him an' know how to josh 'em, that's all.

"Them dolls is all about alike. You can't fool me on 'em. I've seen too many. They want a feller to say somthin' to 'em. If he don't take no notice of 'em, they think he's no good. I ain't afraid to talk to 'em."

"That's right," corroborated the boy on the other side. "He's a hero! I seen him make a mash on a girl yesterday, didn't I, Sandy? She was a peach, too. And tipped his hat to her as she was a-comin' out of a store. Say, she was classy, that one, Sandy."

Experience Makes One Wise

"That wasn't nothin'," said Sandy, loftily. "She'd have made a date with me if I'd asked her."

"How do you know?" asked the boy next to him.

"When you've been among 'em as much as I have you'll get to know, all right, all right," said Sandy, with a wink at the right kind of a front with 'em you'd find out. You've got to get wise to 'em, that's all."

"Maybe you think I ain't."

Sandy smiled in a superior way.

"You ain't the only clam in the chowder," said the boy next to him.

"Ah, g'wan," said Sandy. "You're sore because you don't make the hit with 'em that I do. That's all's the matter with you. You let 'em give you the razz-dazzle, and you think they can hand it to everybody. You watch my smoke when I'm doing fine work some time. That'll learn you."

The boy on the other side laughed appreciatingly.

"You've got to get 'em goin' once," continued Sandy. "You don't want to let 'em bluff you. They'll try it every time, but I don't stand for it, see?

"I'm on to their curves every time, and they know it. If they don't, they ain't long finding it out. You've got to hand 'em out a hot line o' talk. That's what goes. You've got—Whee-ee-ee! Look what's a comin', boys!"

These Girls Weren't Timid

Two young women were coming. Their arms were about each other's waists, and they were giggling delightedly about something.

Sandy tilted his straw hat rakishly forward over one eye. "Me for the blonde," he murmured.

"I don't b'lieve they're comin' this way," whispered the boy on the other side. "They're a-goin' to turn off on the other path. No they ain't."

As the young women came closer it became evident that they were not timid. They glanced at the three on the bench and smiled broadly at one another, and this seemed to have a discouraging effect upon the trio.

Even Sandy seemed to be suddenly inclined to look anywhere but at the self-possessed pair, but his reputation was at stake. After that smile something had to be done. He called in a weak voice, "Hello, girls!"

The two young women stopped a second. "Well, did you ever!" exclaimed the blonde. "Just look at those cunning little boys. Ain't they sweet?"

"Ain't they!" said her brown-haired friend, admiringly. "I wonder if they aren't lost. I don't see anything of their mothers."

Then Sandy Got His.

"What a beautiful color the red-headed child has!" pursued the blonde. "Oh, oh! Mustn't play with matches, Johnny!"

Sandy, his face a deep crimson, was striking a match on his heel with a pathetic attempt at a nonchalant manner.

The young women laughed and walked off, and the puffed forward at his cigarette, striving desperately to think of something that would fit the occasion. The snicker of the youth next to him distracted him.

"Don't you want to be my nurse girl?" he called.

But the two young women had turned the bend in the path and were out of sight and hearing.

Say, kid, I think the newest scheme,
The chorus girls' hotel's a scream;
Some guy sure has a dandy dream.
Ain't it awful, Mabel?

It may be great, but not fer me;
But one good thing it's bound to be,

Bobbie's Slate---By William F. Kirk

There's a Personal Touch in Pa's Criticism of Works on Wit and Humor

This picter is Pa putting sum bo oks in a box. Ma bought them.

THIS picter is Pa putting sum bo oks in a box. Ma bought them. If like a lee box without any ice in it. sed Pa.

As soon as I have had a nip of oil off the sideard, sed Pa, to wet my whissel, I will set down here with my wife & my darling son Bobbie & reed from the works of the grate masters of wit & Humor, including myself. I will reed sum of this stuff first, sed Pa, because the others can wait.

Pa Made Anshunt Greeks Jellus

So Pa went over to the sideboard & wet he calm back he took up a book with was called Vol. One. This book, Pa told Ma is about the Wit & Humor of Anshunt Greece. They was sevy Fatsies, them anshunt Greeks, sed Pa. Sum of the best gags I ever reed was reed was reed by them Aris-tid-aneez; he was a swell fellow, sed Pa, but he had one (1) weekness. He was sary fond of me. Ever hear of Lais? A joke with a good laff to it he used to go out of the house & set in the yard, there was a frog pond in the yard & he used to set & listen to the frogs. If was so fun ny was it one (1) of them fits of jellesy, sed Pa, that he rote the Frog Konw. I helpe-d him rite it, sed Pa.

Ma was bizzy over the pages, sed Pa, & see if we can find sum of my doap. There is on (1) poem of mine which I think we will find in here, sed Pa, a poem which is called Artichokes the Just. It started off, If I remember rite, sum-thing like this:

Yure the wheest, jnatest guy
Of the present day, Bo.
I'm for you, tooth, nail & eye,
Come on, you Greek gazabo!

It was a grate pome, but I don't find it in here, sed Pa, after glansing thru the index. I doan't find anything in here at all that was rote by me. It must have been a swful bush league outfit that got up this Vol One, sed Pa.

We will now turn to Vol. Two (2) sed Pa, wich is called the Wit & Humor of Rome. & see if I can dig one of my good old Roman looks out of this Vol.

There is sum fine doop in that Vol about Juvynal, sed Ma, he was a grate hand to bawl folks out, he was awful sarcastic, but he was funny, too. I knew him well, sed Pa, but even if I calm to roasting he always had a cup to me.

In fact, sed Pa, after Juvynal bet Horashus at the bridge wist parties that there was only one man he was afraid of wen it calm to roasting, me & me alone. I was afraid of John McGraw sitting after a umpire, sed Pa.

Then Pa Got Prity Mad

In any of pure clever wit & humor in this Vol, sed Ma. Not a thing, sed Pa. Its funny too, sed Pa. The make-up man must have been drunk. This is a prity poor Anthology, sed Pa. Pa was beginning to git awful mad.

How ever I could see this was a fine set of books? sed Pa. Who ever advised you to buy this bunch of tripe, sed Pa. Why, he awful, I wouldent have it in my library.

So then Pa packed up the books & sent them back. Ma was mad, too, because Pa dident like her present. If I only bought books that had sure stuff in them, sed Ma, we wuldent have a library.

MESSENGER'S MESSAGE.

"Sam," asked the first messenger boy, "got any novels to swap?"

"I got 'Big Foot Bill's Revenge,'" replied the other.

"Is it a long story?"

"No. You can finish it easy in two messages."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Manicure Lady

She Delves Deeper Into the Puzzle of Marital Bliss

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I BROUGHT down another stack of them letters from married people," said the Manicure Lady. "I thought it would read some of them to me, because you think most married people is happy."

"I don't see most married people," said the Head Barber. "I said that me and the missus was happy. We ain't a majority, you know."

"Wilfred says that most of the letters is wrote by cynics," continued the Manicure Lady. "He says that true love never did run true to form. The editor of the Brighton Bazoo complimented Wilfred yesterday on his new department, and promised him a raise as soon as they got another subscriber. Here is some of the letters.

Got Herself—Alone

" 'Dear Editor—Regarding your question, "Are seven married couples out of eight unhappy?" beg to state that they are, and that I am the whole seven.

" 'My wife was a very wealthy girl, and I married her for herself alone the way I figured. Her father had a deal read for me. He tried to put it over on me by the terms of which I was to be his daughter for five years, at the end of which time I was to become a beneficiary in his will. He is the health test old cuss you ever saw, and looking at the dark circles of the future I can't see any nourishment for me.

" 'My wife, when you look at her from anything save a mercenary angle, is quite a thing but charming. She looks something like Roseway Davis, and her form is all to the suffragette. Oh, I am so miserable. Day after day I sit in my room and weep until my eyes are red and my heart is lead. Pity me, Mr. Editor.

" 'FRANK FALLGUY.'

Just One Good Year

" 'Dear Editor—There may be one couple out of eight that is happy in this world, but I have failed to find it. My husband was a perfect dear the first year we were married. He smoked only one cigar a day, never touched anything intoxicating, and hovered about me like a moth fitting around an oil lamp. As Bertha Clay used to say, the year that followed the marriage of Harold Sngthe and Gladys Glucose was a golden year, set with diamonds and blood red rubies.

" 'Then my husband began to come out at 1. One year of being good was about all that he could stand, apparently, and today he is a fiend in human form. He smokes a cigar after every meal, and he joined the Words and Music Club last Winter and has gone to three of their meetings. Every one of these three occasions was a nightmare for me, because he got home along toward morning and wanted to sing "I'm Tying the Leaves So They Won't Fall Down," or "The Home of Too Much Trouble." The neighbors naturally made some awful remarks.

" 'My Editor, I am not happy, and my husband is not happy. Please print this in a conspicuous place. Try to get it next to a wines and liquors ad, so my husband will be sure to see it. — 'GERALDINE.'

Rounds of Fighting

" 'Dear Editor—I am as happy as the day is long, every 31st second day of December. My husband and I are perfectly mated, as he is a rugged, aggressive fighter and I can go some myself. He calls me his dear little sparring partner, and the neighbors always shout, when they see us coming into the flat: "Both members of this club."

"Sometimes he wins by a slight shade, sometimes I put him out before the fight is much more than started.

" 'I do not know the meaning of the word "fear." He tried to put a bluff on me the first day we were married, and I creased over a short hook to the proper point, sending him to the Oriental rug with a D. and S. thud. My husband is the most even tempered man you ever saw. He is ugly all the time. I must close now, as we are going to have another fight.

" 'ALICE.'

Get Along Fine

" 'Dear Mr. Editor—Me and the old lady gits along fine. We ain't none of dem society blokes, and dere ain't any affinities ting in our neighborhood. My wife does all de cooking and washing, and I earns de coin. When my shins is sore from climbing porches she rubs 'em with alcohol. We are great pals. Sadie and me.

" 'MIKE THE BITE.'"

"The consensus of opinion seems to be agin the happy thing, doesn't it, now?" said the Head Barber.

"That's what it does," said the Manicure Lady. "After all, George, there ain't so much happiness in life, especially in the circles like Boston and Pittsburg.

"Pittsburg's a good town for us manicure girls, because the people there gits money under their nails, and it's a good place for the millionaires. They don't have to get out and run for their wages. And if you want to be happy in New York, it takes the whole bank roll. Life is a awful puzzle, ain't it, George?"

Expert Advice on Beauty

By the Professor

FOR HOLLOW CHEEKS

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you kindly tell me of something that will make my cheeks fill out? I get plenty warm enough otherwise. Will lanoline make hair grow on the face? ANXIOUS Y. S. A.

USE a cream made with almond oil instead of lanoline, as the latter will cause the hair to grow and is at all susceptible. Massage with a circular movement until the surface has absorbed plenty of the cream. Dash with cold water into which you have put a few drops of benzoin. Slap the cheeks smartly with a washing wet in the water and with the balls of the fingers. Do not bruise them, but just make them tingle. This brings the blood to the surface so that it absorbs the skin food.

BRILLIANTINE FOR HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Is brilliantine useful to the hair? If not, how is it made? B. F. S.

IT make a good brilliantine mix together six ounces of sweet almond oil, four ounces of alcohol, one ounce of glycerine, two ounces of deodorized castor oil and twenty drops of oil of rose geranium. This contains nothing that could harm the hair, but you should use a very little of it at a time and only occasionally for it will make the hair grow faster if used in excess. Put a few drops in the palm of your hand, rub the palms together until it is thoroughly distributed over them and then stroke the hair lightly with the palms, after which brush it well.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

BETTER APART.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl between seventeen years of age, and am deeply in love with a man six years my senior, whom I have known for the past year and a half. We have kept company for the past six months. He told me he loved me but really did not know his own mind. The day after we had been keeping company he took me out three times, and was always nice when we met, but as soon as we would come home he always had some complaint about me, which always led to a quarrel. We have been parted six months, and now I have been told by several people that he thinks talks about me, but you think it would be proper for me to write to him, expressing him to meet me at a certain place, as I would like to settle this matter? I love him dearly and would like to keep company with him. IT D.

IT never is. I would not believe about that young man. He seems very hard to suit, and if you wrote seeking a reconciliation he would never think of you to get the fact. If you take my advice, you will let the matter drop.

COME TO THE POINT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am in love with a young lady that my age, twenty-one, and we have been keeping company for nearly a year. I was out with her Sunday, had a very pleasant evening and on leaving her told her I would see her Wednesday night. She said she could not see me Wednesday or Sunday, as she had a date. Now, what I would like to know is if this looks as if she was giving me a slut to stay away. Please advise me. L. T.

IF you are not engaged to the girl, there is no reason why she should not go out with others as often as she likes. If you want to keep her to yourself why don't you ask her to marry you. Perhaps she thinks that you have neglected her long enough without coming to the point. Anyway, it is up to you to find out what is the matter by a plain talk with her. If you want to marry her, and if you do not, you should in justice to her make no fuss about the other men with whom she chooses to go. It was quite natural that she might resent your statement that you "would see her." She would probably prefer for you to ask the privilege of seeing her instead of taking it for granted that she would jump at the chance.

A SAD STATE OF AFFAIRS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a married woman and have three children. This past year I have got to love a man about eight years younger than I am, who is very unhappy with his wife, but thinks very much of my husband. He is devoted to me, and does all in his power to make life better for me. My husband is good, but is a very heavy drinker and life is sometimes unbearable, as sometimes I seem to hate him. I simply can't bear to give up my friend as he is so good to me. Would you kindly advise me what to do for the best. D. D.

YOU would rather give up your friend than your children, would you not? And if you left your husband you would probably have to give them up. I pity you with all my heart, but I do not think you should continue your friendship with the other man. He is too young for you to begin with. For your children's sake you had better put this interest out of your life.

Helps for Busy Housewives

Try this once and you will always follow it: When you put your roast in the oven put a small dish of vinegar in also. It will not only keep your meat from burning, but will make it much more tender that it would otherwise be. A tablespoonful of vinegar put in a five-pound pot roast will make the meat more tender and palatable.

Letters From American Readers on the Marriage Question

THE unquestioned tendency of human beings to "judge others by themselves" could hardly be better illustrated than in the letters received by the BOSTON AMERICAN in answer to the question:

Are seven out of eight married couples unhappy?

Almost without exception, those who are unhappy agree with Dr. Mitchell, who said: "Seven out of eight married couples are unhappy." The happy ones are firmly believe that the great majority of married couples are unhappy, and the DIX says.

What do YOU think about it? Try to forget your own affairs and decide in accordance with your observation of married couples in general. Here are some of the letters already received:

True Marriage Always Happy.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:
Dear Sir—If seven out of eight marriages were unhappy, we might expect ruin to befall the country. On the sanctity of the marriage tie and the home depends the prosperity of the country. True marriages—those entered into with the right disposition—yield the proper rearing of children for humanity and the welfare of society—are never unhappy. A true marriage is made in the heart and is baptized with God's love. The ceremony is only to satisfy the demands of society.

If women would be more generous, there would be so many failures. Theirs is the larger and better part. No man ever loved a woman but he loved her ideals. Women must live the lives that command respect and love. They can make their homes earthly paradises, where husband and children will go loving satellites.

All boy! Oh, no! The most beautiful marriage is there. True marriages are happy. Any other sort of a union deserves death.

HAPPY WIFE AND MOTHER.

Found a Taste of Heaven.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:
Dear Sir—I have been married a number of years, blessed with children. They have been beautiful years. Language cannot express love. My married life has been a taste, or a reflection, of heaven. I am twenty-nine years of age; my husband, forty-two. Our love has grown stronger for each other every day. We both realize what Christ meant when He said: "They twain shall be one flesh." We are perfectly united. We are one.

Although my husband and I are opposites—he being extremely fair and myself very dark, and temper mentally very different—we are perfectly happy because we love each other. Love softeneth long and is kind; is not easily provoked; doth not behave itself unseemly." I am firmly persuaded that if the holy state of matrimony was entered into with love in the hearts of man and woman we would have no need of divorce courts. I do not believe that the man lives who will be untrue to the woman he purely loves. Impurity will pass away when men and women learn to love each other.

ISOBELLA SHIELDS.

Blames Man's Immorality.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:
Dear Sir—The great question, "Are Seven Out of Eight Married Couples Unhappy?" is pretty well answered by the writer, who seems to take pride in the name "Divorcee." The poor soul at least tells the true state of affairs. The young men of to-day, especially in New York City, would hang his head in shame if his comrades should taunt him as being morally clean. But let a girl refuse to marry until she finds a young man without a "past" and I will assure you there won't be a marriage ceremony performed in this city for the next twenty years. We Americans don't know what morals are.

POND LILY SALAD

TAKE one and a half eggs for each person. Put them on in cold water, boil gently a half hour and drop into cold water to loosen the shells. When cold, shell and cut the eggs in two, lengthwise. Arrange the leaves around each salad plate and press the yolks through a sieve into the centre of each plate. Then slice the whites lengthwise, cutting seven or eight strips from each egg. Arrange these slices around yellow centres. This will look like a pond lily. Pass salad dressing in separate bowl.

THE "MERRY-GO-ROUND" IS A WHIRL

Raymond Hitchcock's "Two Balmy Breaths from Bohemia" Scores Hit.

PLAYHOUSES CROWDED

A dazzling, bewildering, kaleidoscopic array of suppressedly gowned and shapely young women who can sing and dance well; elaborate stage settings and a profusion of songs and catchy music, with a laugh every minute from first curtain rise to curtain fall—in a nutshell, you have the "Merry-Go-Round," with the diminutive Raymond Hitchcock. The show opened the season before a crowded house at the Castle Square last night.

Had Hitchcock been playing before an audience of former fellow-townsmen in Auburn, N. Y., he could not have received a more spontaneous, enthusiastic reception than Boston gave him. His entrance was characterized by applause which continued fully ten minutes. Then he had to make a speech. It was a "Hitchcock night," from 8 until 11:15.

Older Than it Looks.

"The Merry-Go-Round," although older than it looks, is new to Boston. And Boston is going to like it first rate. The programmes quite characterize it as "two balmy breaths from Bohemia," and there's no mince pie to it just when the final curtain drops on the audience begs for another breath.

Supporting Hitchcock are such well-known people as Bobby North, Isabelle Maribelli, Gladys Rose, Palmer and Vivia Ogden. In addition there are seventy odd others, and they all whirl around the popular comedian in such even merry-go-round fashion that Bohemia's two breaths couldn't stir up such a whirl but fascinatingly.

The final scene of the last act in somewhat "Merry Widow-esque." It is representative of the Cafe de Boheme on New Year's eve. It's worth the price of admission alone to see Hitchcock sing "Three Cheers a Night" to dear Mr. Martinelli who, like all of the Metropole.

His Old Time Style.

"Reconstructions" is sung by Hitchcock in his old time style. He patronized after his "Life's Dream" proposition. "After All" song, of "Yankee Consul" fame, I call it's better. Margaret Sawyer, a Maiden Lane girl, is the "Merry-Go-Round" grass widow with a "dimple" for a title, and she not only makes a good stage appearance, but she sings and dances well.

"Don't worry, it don't do any good," The Merry-Go-Round. You'll wager that Hitchcock hums that refrain to himself at the close of every act, as he bows to the pay of the "Merry-Go-Round" and unstoppable smiles, seems a Heaven with affected Yonkers lodge in Coventry Pair Gwennis seems to be the favorite among the dancing district of New York, in the second and third scenes of the first act.

Then you'll go into convulsions of laughter when Hitchcock and Miss Rose "Go-Rounders into the New York's spirit of "Is Dehydrated And you'll agree with me it's all over, calling the "Merry-Go-Round" one of the best.

Some Fascinating Bills.

Keith's.—An ingenious combination of military maneuvres, ending with a spectacular waterfall picture, is the closing bill at Keith's and the Boston Theatre this week. It is called "Our Boys in Blue," and is carried out by scenes and songs of the Spanish War. The young men are remarkably clean, alert, well set-up aggregation.

Frances Wayne, styled the stage possesses "the Blind Policeman," in her vaudeville debut on this week's program. Wayne gives a very artistic performance, a welcome innovation in the playing of the piano on the vaudeville stage.

Another unusual feature is the Sand Dance, in which the woman of the pair is paradoxically, "the strong man." She does all sorts of difficult stunts with marvelous ease. Three Fox, a prestidigitator, closes the act with a cleverly line of talk, to quote the newspapers, "of the Lower Manhattan district of New York, in the second and the street in the third."

Then you'll go into convulsions of laughter when Hitchcock and Miss Rose "Go-Rounders into the New York's spirit of "Is Dehydrated And you'll agree with me it's all over, calling the "Merry-Go-Round" one of the best.

Majestic—"The Red Rose," a new farce comedy by Grace Livingston Furniss, has settled down for its engagement at the Majestic Theatre, where a crowded house greeted the beginning of the second week last night. The comedy is bright, and the cast is such as to unnecessarily demands upon the patience of the audience. It also has a pleasing story. Lee Phenty, who leads an excellent cast, is fortunate in the fun making. The company wins the constant approval of the audience.

Globe—"Wine, Woman and Song" began its second and last week at the Globe Theatre yesterday to two record breaking audiences. The first act consists of variable musical numbers and the impersonations of the different stage stars of the day. Mary Carr's impersonation of Lord Warfield is very good. Lew Hearn plays the part of the jolly Sheriff to perfection. He followed very fluently. Charles Raymond as Director Kettle, James Miller as Robert Mantein, Alan Coogan as George M. Cohan, scored a great hit, introducing many new dances. Bonita, the beautiful star, is now in the limelight in her new spangled gown, also in a travesty on "Three Weeks," in which she now proves to be an actress of great ability.

Palace—Two good sized audiences at the Palace Theatre yesterday were filled laughing and applauding all through the delightful entertainment presented by the stock company. The bill is the best given since the summer season began and the company is better than ever. There are seven specialties, so that the fun is fast all through the action of the burlesques, while the big chorus of pretty and accomplished girls contributes plenty of good musical numbers and charming dances. The burlesques are most pleasingly staged and costumed. The vaudeville presents a series of most interesting moving pictures.

Bowdoin Square—It was a merry assemblage of patrons that gathered at the Bowdoin Square Theatre last night to witness a most creditable performance of that spectacular melodrama, "Roger's Defiance," in which Katherine Goodrich the opportunity of playing the leading role of Cardyal Nogent from Australia. "Arrah Na Pogue," by Dion Boucicault, will be the comedy.

Tremont—"The Merry Widow" is the candy for reopening the Tremont Theatre, and Tuesday, August 25, is the date when Henry W. Savage will make the presentation.

Hollis—"The Gay Musician" opens at the Hollis Street Theatre again on Monday, August 31, with Amelia Stone and other favorites in the cast.

Castle Square—The Castle Square box office will open next Monday morning for the opening performances of the John Craig stock company in "The Road to Yesterday." The date will be Friday evening, August 28.

Moving Pictures.

Hub—For a realistic and exciting reproduction of an automobile race, "The Dieppe Circuit of 1908" at the Hub shows the great race as it actually takes place. The singers are exceptionally talented. Betty Clarendon, the bandlinger of the Ward-Yokes company, possesses a voice far above the average. Miss Sanborn and Miss Clarella, one of the old-time favorites were also well received.

Scenic Temple.—Two hours of choice refined entertainment of a varied character crowned the Scenic Temple last evening, while during the afternoon a large and appreciating audience. The Illustrated songs are new and are sung by artists of good reputation. The orchestra selections and the choruses were taken up by the audience in a hearty and spontaneous manner.

Star—With moving pictures full of action and color, and with many tuneful songs illustrated by the moving pictures, all, the patrons of the Star Theatre in Washington street are greatly pleased with one of the best bills ever put on at the popular place.

At the Parks.

Paragon.—Such a varied and tempting bill of fare as is the order at Paragon Park that the most difficult thing one finds to do is to say what and how to see them all in one visit. There are of the many attractions that were not yesterday, and the attractions were the magnet for thousands and thousands of visitors who progressed from the best of the season. Perhaps the most unusual amusement with its twenty-four cages of wild animals, is one of the most popular attractions. The Olympia, the Dance Hall, the Big Flume, the Roulette Wheel, Alligator Joe's Farm, the Mexican Sweet Ballet and the numerous other attractions all are busy and booming.

Nantasket Beach.—Nantasket Beach is the regular story of every day at Wonderland. For those who seek the Pure Rose Bill's great, picturesque Wild West exposition, with its big company of cowboys, Indians, Cossacks, and ranch people of all sorts, supplies them in abundance. More thrills can generally be found in the free circus arena. The chief one of the day is of thrills also in the exhilarating scenic railway ride, the revolving of the chutes, the trip to Hell Gate, Love's Journey, Fatherinson Tunnel, the little railway, Pilgrim's Progress, Human Laundry, House That Jack Built and on the Velvet Coaster.

Lexington Park—Lexington Park has proved a popular amusement place during the past week. Yesterday the beautiful park and pavilion was crowded with a large number of tourists. The theatre program for this week is an exceptionally good one. The Women's Orchestra which furnishes music in the band stand afternoon and evening, consists of some of the best musicians of Boston. The free moonlight gardens, the restaurant and casino and the beautiful grounds and surroundings, with the large athletic field and the acres and acres of beautiful pine and grove land, surrounding for all sorts of picnics and family outings, together with the many amusements, including the dancing pavilion, make this park an ideal resort.

Norumbega—Yesterday at Norumbega Park large crowds were on hand to see the novel and wonderful free attraction, Norman's famous diving horses, King and Queen. The manner in which these wonderful animals make their dive from a platform fifty feet high into a tank of water was exceedingly exciting and interesting to the large throng. The horses, without any urging or coaxing, eagerly walk up to the platform and at a time stand facing the tank for a moment or so and then make a real dive head foremost, landing in the water with their forefeet first, coming to the surface for a short while and then emerge, making them perform. Rather pleased with their clever performances. In the open air gallery a special program in honor of the large number of conventions in town has been arranged.

Down the Bay.

Cape Cod—A remarkable school of codfish is in Cape Cod bay and the visitors in that region, as well as the regular summer men are having a harvest, as the fish are hitting fast and furious. Steamer Cape Cod and the smaller craft are doing a rushing leaving No. 201 Atlantic avenue at 9 in the morning.

Satellite—Concert music by an orchestra is an interesting feature of a trip on the Satellite, the new steamer for the deep-sea fishing grounds. A prize for the largest catch in a rowboat every day. Daily trips start from Central wharf, foot of State street, at 10 a. m.

Variations—Everywhere one goes, on the Hollis Street Theatre stage and in the universal topic is: "About seafish." It is the all-prevailing subject of conversation nowadays, but "Where to go?" and "How to get there?" are very perplexing problems to thousands. George Marston's forthcoming journal "Travel," a thirty-two page illustrated book, will be found to solve all of just what you have been looking for in the line of vacation tours. It is issued free of postage to any address. Address George H. Marston, No. 298 Washington street, Boston.

URGE NATIONAL HONOR FOR GEORGIA MARTYR

CATHOLICS URGE CONGRESSIONAL ACTION FOR LAD WHO SAVED BATTLESHIP.

That William Burke, the savior of the Battleship Georgia last Summer, be honored by Congress with a statue as a memorial of his brave deed in closing the hatchway when, from a huge gun was threatening to send burning powder down into the magazine of the ship, was urged this afternoon in a resolution which the Rev. Thomas A. Judge, C. M., of Germantown, Philadelphia, presented in the convention of the Knights of Columbus at Nobile Sodalities.

Father Burke, who is a member of the Catholic Community of Vincentians, well known as an eloquent expounder of the Catholic faith, received fatal injuries in the heroic act.

He said:

"Burke saved his ship and gave his life as a sacrifice in doing so. He could have escaped but had he done so the ship would doubtless have been lost. Burke saved the American navy from a crippling disaster. The future would have had to mourn the loss of a great ship and her men.

"Burke's act is greater than that of winning a great naval battle, for he saved the navy and the officers and his men from the regret and possible suspicion with which the destruction of the battleship would always have been regarded.

Honor to Boy Martyr.

"Congress, by doing justice and giving official recognition to America's boy martyr, would be what is very honorable itself, for strong and great acts be the natural and true legislators who place a pedestal on bravery and loyalty when found in the lowliest."

In honoring Burke a noble service of inestimable value will be done to the country. It will raise the prominent of our army and navy, and while serving to attract the best element of our young men to her service, be honored by such a martyr's blood.

Burke, the unknown seaman hidden in the turret who gives up his life for a great cause is as worthy of public honor as a National Park as a man who stands in the limelight.

"I entrust the honor and the memory of this whose sacrificial act called by perhaps the greatest President of the Republic, one of the noblest deeds in the annals of the American navy, that a mate the American Federation by its simple appeal for justice to one of America's greatest memories to prove that the Catholic Church is the mother not only of great and good sentiment, but that she breeds men for public service and men who are exalted by our Presidents as 'the noblest in the annals of our army and navy.'"

Resolution Offered.

The resolution offered by Rev. Thomas A. Judge is as follows:

Resolved, That the American Federation of Catholic Societies instructs the Catholic members of Congress to urge upon the Congressmen and United States Senators of their respective States to petition Congress that it recognize in a public, appropriate and suitable manner the most honored spot the bravery and devotion of William Burke, a member of the navy of the United States navy, who sacrificed his life in such a way that thereby he saved not her men and officers from destruction and also saved our generation from the awful calamity of bequeathing to posterity the obligation of sorrowing for what would have been a great naval disaster, one of the worst disasters in the history of the American navy."

BISHOP HENDRICKS TELLS OF WORK DONE IN THE PHILIPPINES

A declaration by Bishop Thomas A. Hendricks of Cebu, Philippine Islands, that the people of the islands are not making an effort to get full play for the Catholics, a prospective struggle over the report of the commission appointed by President Taft and a banquet tendered by different cities for the 1909 session in Symphony Hall to-day of the Catholic Federation of Catholic Societies.

The convention was called to order by National President Edward Feeney of Lowell at 10 a. m. Prayer was offered by Archbishop William H. O'Connell of Boston.

After the reading of congratulatory telegrams from various fraternal organizations the delegates listened to an address on "Conditions in the Philippines and the Duty of the United States Toward the Islands," by Bishop Hendricks.

Pleads for Filipinos.

convention, were features at the opening Bishop Hendricks said in part:

"When I was appointed to take charge of the diocese of Cebu the people of that locality heard of it and awaited my arrival. They were of the impression that I was delegated by the United States government to look after their interests. I told them that I was sent by the Sovereign Pontiff, Pius X.

"Three miles outside the harbor of Cebu, I received the first welcome home, and the men from Cebu came out in boats to meet me. Every one greeted me with the words, 'I thought not of their nationality they expected me as a priest and God sent me as a messenger that perpetrated their allegiance to the Holy Father. I soon found appreciation for my faith, and it is the duty of organizations of this kind to see that they get their due.

"One of the commanding tenets of our faith is that God is the Father of all mankind. But we must see that the Filipinos get labor to earn his daily bread. This is the thing we have to meet in the Philippines, and if Congress does the right thing in enacting legislation bringing about free trade with the United States and Canada one of the problems affecting the interests of the island will be solved.

Will Speak in New England.

Before going West Mr. Hilgen will make a number of addresses in New England. He will open it at the Church of Immaculate Conception in West Springfield at the opening of a series of lawn fetes. The Rev. Father John Mullen has secured the same party candidate for the office. A short rousing crowd to hear him.

Arrangements were completed to-day for a monster Massachusetts Democratic rally to be held in support of the Hilgen-Graves ticket at Tiger Ridge on Saturday evening of next week. The Ridge is a grove about midway between the city and Blue Hill.

HISGEN OPENS WEST CAMPAIGN IN INDIANA

HOOSIER STATE WILL BE A GREAT BATTLE GROUND OF THE NEW PARTY.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 11.—It is expected that Thomas R. Hisgen, Independence party candidate for President, will open his Western campaign at Indianapolis upon his Western campaign at Indianapolis upon his Western campaign at addresses at the State convention of the new party.

The demands that Mr. Hisgen come to the State of Indiana for the great battle have been so insistent that he will attend the convention if such an arrangement centers to the plans of the local committee.

The new party proposes to make the Hoosier State a great battle ground, and will put up a fight for the electoral votes of the respective States to perform the function of Vice-President at the Independence Party conventions, a great leading star in the political firmament, ordinary man of immense popularity, will be held meanwhile. It is the intention of the citizens of Peterboro, Mr. Hisgen's home town, to surprise the candidate in that manner. I am convinced that they do not represent the people as well as they do their special interests. I am enthusiastic and could almost imagine myself in Bulgaria.

Because the Independence party represents the people more than any other political organization of modern times, Wendell Merrill of Kansas City, who worked for Bryan in 1900 and Parker four years ago, says he will be with you and with all that is possible to secure your success. Your platform and principles ought to suit.

"We Want an Honest Man."

To Hoarke, of No. 333 West Twenty-sixth street, Chicago, writes: "Accept my promise that my vote is yours. In all my homes man we want for President, and I shall do all I can for him. I am a Democrat and have been for years, but I am now in a position where the Independence Party is superior to the old parties and I believe them to give you their support."

RECEIVERS IN FLOUR MILLS

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 11.—Receivers of the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills Company, limited, who were appointed by the Federal Court on Saturday, to-day filed their bond of $500,000 and took charge of the properties to operate them. Henry T. Thompson, counsel for the company, has so stated, and the receivers are in full control. The property of the company is now in charge of the receivers and will be operated by them. Pillsbury "A" Mill, one of the properties, sends its weekly output on Saturday and the receivers expect to start grinding again as usual this morning.

FLEET IN ROUND OF FESTIVITIES AT AUCKLAND

Brilliant Reception to American Officers at Auckland City Hall.

1,000 "JACKIES" ASHORE

AUCKLAND, Aug. 11.—New Zealand again to-day with a lavish hand showered its hospitality upon the officers and men of the United States Atlantic battleship fleet. The chief event of the day was the reception to Rear Admiral Sperry and his officers given in Irish Hall by the mayor and citizens of Auckland. To meet the naval officers had gathered all the chiefs, civil and military, and hundreds of citizens. Numerous women, gowned in the latest Winter fashions, also attended the function, which was a brilliant one in every respect.

After the reception, Admiral Sperry entertained the members of the Legislature at luncheon on board the Connecticut.

Shore leave was granted to 1,000 blue-jackets. Theatre parties and other entertainments had been arranged, and decorated electric cars conveyed the men of the fleet to the numerous beauty spots in the suburbs.

Shortly after noon the men were taken to various places where the committees had arranged elaborate luncheons for them.

This evening a grand State ball will be given in honor of Admiral Sperry, and during the visit of the fleet by Lord Plunkitt, the Governor, the Legislature and various smokers have been arranged for the officers and men.

Much satisfaction is expressed by Admiral Sperry that Premier Mosier Ward has waived the regulations which prevent the landing of an armed force in order that the Americans may compete in the matches here. The principal match in New Zealand will take place to-morrow and the American marksmen are hopeful of making a good showing.

BILL PAPKE READY FOR HIS TWO BATTLES ON THURSDAY

Illinois Thunderbolt Clashes with Mantell and Carroll Here.

Contests Will Be Both of Six Rounds' Duration for a Decision.

Great interest is being taken by the fans hereabouts in the double fight bill which will be held at the Armory A. A. on Thursday night.

The cause for all the excitement is the appearance of Bill Papke, the Illinois Thunderbolt, in two six-round bouts.

One of the opponents for the clever Western scrapper, with his Frank Merriell, the Pawtucket miller, who jumped right into the limelight when he knocked out Homer Medley, the hard-hitting Charlestown scrapper.

Jimmy Carroll, the clever Brooklyn middleweight, will be the other adversary of Papke.

With two such hard fighters as his opponents Bill Papke will be called upon to show the best that is in him, and, if he wins both bouts decisively then the fans will be assured that he will give a good account of himself in his second battle with Stanley Ketchel on the coast Labor Day.

Papke is finishing his training at Blackstone, Rhode Island. He is getting himself in the fittest possible condition, as he cannot afford to take chances with such formidable scrappers as Mantell and Donovan.

After these two contests Papke has another hard mill on his hands in that of August 18, when he goes against Sailor Burke at the National Sporting Club.

Papke is confident of winning all three bouts. He looks upon them as part of his training for Ketchel.

Just as soon as his bout with Burke is fought Papke will jump on a train for Frisco, and there go into the most strenuous training for his coming contest with Ketchel.

There will probably be a lot of wagers made to the effect that Papke will get the decision in both bouts Thursday night.

Papke says that he will not be content with a mere decision, but that he will try to win by the knockout route on both occasions.

Papke Putting Finishing Touches on Training at Blackstone, R. I.

Expects to Win Decisively Against Both Opponents at the Armory Club.

PAPKE SURE TO MEET KETCHEL ON LABOR DAY

There has been a feeling of uneasiness prevalent at Los Angeles because of doubt regarding the appearance of Bill Papke and Stanley Ketchel in a bout before Jim Jeffries's Club, Labor Day.

Baron Long of the Jeffries A. C. wanted to ascertain that the men would meet, wired the Sporting Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN, asking to make sure that Papke would fight.

Manager Jones was reached on the 'phone at Blackstone, and he said that the Illinois Thunderbolt never intended for a minute to back out of the match, and that he, Jones, would come to the BOSTON AMERICAN office, Wednesday, and post $500 for Papke's appearance against Ketchel.

The Sporting Editor immediately wired Long at Los Angeles the developments.

Baron Long gave out the following statement to-day to the Los Angeles fight fans:

"I scarcely think that Ketchel or his manager made the announcement reported them regarding calling off their Labor Day fight at Vernon with Papke, but to play safe I have telegraphed Papke at Blackstone, Mass., asking him to call at the BOSTON AMERICAN office and post his forfeit.

"I also have telegraphed Ketchel assuring him that everything is O. K. The match will be staged Labor Day as scheduled."

PARENT HERE FOR CY'S DAY

George Davis and Billie Sullivan of the White Sox, who hoped to be here on Cy Young's day, cannot come on account of injuries, but instead Freddy Parent and Captain Fielder Jones will replace them. Washington will send Pitcher Burns and Jim Delehanty, the latter always a great favorite in the Hub since he played on the National team.

McConnell having 507 votes the best of the question over his veteran opponent.

GREAT SEASON FOR TROTTING

It is surmised that 1908 will likely be such a year as was 1903, when Lou Dillon (1:58½), Major Delmar (1:59¾) and Dan Patch (1:55) made newspaper correspondents burn the midnight oil many a time and oft in efforts to supply the public with the news or their wonderful doings.

The year 1908 is to be a trotting one, too, Minor Heir so far being the only sidewheeler that appears as a first-class sensation. Jack Leyburn (2:04¼), Margaret O. (2:08¼), Amy Brooks (2:05¼), Highball (2:03¾), Sonoma Girl (2:05¼), Alcaste (2:07¼), Spanish Queen (2:07¾), Sterling McKinney (2:06¾), Annbetts, Fleming Boy (2:07½), Lillian R. (2:06¾), Angelus (2:06), Wilkesheart (2:09¾), Carlokin (2:08¼), Hamburg Belle (2:05¼), etc., present a group of trotters the speed possibilities of which we have never seen equaled in a single season.

This coterie are almost all fresh, young and have not as yet reached the point where it can be estimated that they are at their limit. Before the season closes at least four more trotters to the ultra-select 2:04 list, it is expected, will have been added.

The date for the light car race has not been fixed, but it will probably take place the day before the Grand Prize Race. It will be held on the finest course in the world, the contestants being eligible for at least four miles of the 16-mile course.

The Europeans do not take so serious a view of the American racing car as they will be content to run with the Vanderbilt cup over the fastest course in the world. It is safe to predict that they will easily contrive to get in by the back door and without much fear of any publishment at home.

Much is the racing car situation abroad as set forth by the Paris correspondent of the "Automobile."

M'LEAN POSTS FORFEIT TO RACE ELMER COLLINS

Hugh MacLean, the champion pace follower in the bike game, came to the front at the Y. M. C. A. to-day and posted $100 to meet Elmer Collins in a match race at any distance on any track and any amount.

MacLean was decidedly sore for Collins getting away with the race last Saturday night and states that the referee would have been his but for Collins taking his spare motor when his motor went wrong, leaving MacLean without any when he had trouble near the last part of the race.

"I'm just putting up this little stuff," said MacLean, "to show that I am confident that I can lick Collins in any kind of a race and that I did not lose my title of champion fairly when he got credit for defeating me last Saturday night. I have nothing against Collins personally, as I think he is a nice clean fellow, but I consider that I am the better rider as I have won fourteen out of the fifteen races in which I conquered this season.

"If Collins and his friends think that he can beat me let them come around to-day and see me and I'll bet them any amount and give them two to one if they want it. All I want is a chance to prove that I am still champion and not Collins and I'll meet him in any kind of race he wants, the faster the better and if I don't beat him in a fair and square race I don't want anything for it.

"I am not saying this alone for Collins. Any man in the world can have the same chance. I have had to work hard to get up at the top of the game and the records will show that I held the best records from one mile up racing in the pace game. I don't see why I should have to beat a man and I haven't any doubt about beating Collins.

"I have put up the stuff for him to cover if he means business and I am open to meet him at any time, the sooner the better. I claim the championship by beating all the big ones, including Darragon, the Frenchman, Walthour, Moran and Butler and I don't intend letting Collins get it, he can beat me let them come around to-day from me."

YALE OUTLOOK BRIGHTER THAN AT HARVARD

When August rolls around the college men begin to think of football. It is only a few weeks when the colleges and schools open their doors, and the various coaches will get busy selecting their material from the thousands of athletic men who will report

When Yale loses, besides the all-American tackle and quarterback, Bigelow and Jones; the all-American end, C. F. Alcott; also, Howard Jones, who was the other end; Paige, the other tackle, and Dinee, the substitute quarterback and E. C. Congdon, the center. The regular players remaining are: Captain A. Coster and Capt.-elect Mooney, guards; Fred Murphy and A. H. Bridge, halfbacks; E. H. Coy, fullback. The greatest work will be to train a quarterback to take Jones' place. Coaches L. H. THE GREAT MORGAN ROBBERY

A Thrilling New York Story of Mystery, Romantic Love and Daring Deeds

By JOSEPH O'BRIEN

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner.

CHAPTER XI.
A Woman of Mystery

"NORA HARDING!" Norman almost shouted the name as he recoiled in amazement from his calm, imperturbable young visitor.

A light smile of genuine amusement crossed her face as she looked at him. She did not speak for a moment, and Norman so far recovered his wits as to cross to the door, look out into the passage and then close the door carefully. Then he turned questioningly to Miss Harding.

Here was the key to the mystery, the woman for whom all the police in Greater New York and the surrounding country were searching.

If she were found she would be arrested beyond a doubt, and lodged in jail possibly with a charge of homicide against her. Although there had been no accusation made against her, there had been veiled intimations from the police, published in the newspapers, that she alone could clear up the mystery.

Her picture had appeared in the papers, along with that of Ruth Garden, the clippings of which Norman secretly treasured, and her description was posted everywhere.

Yet here she was, calmly making her way through the streets and calling on him of all men in the world.

These thoughts flashed through Norman's brain before he found voice to say:

"You are the Miss Harding who was Mr. Garden's secretary?"

"Yes, I am that Nora Harding, and I have come here to see you, Mr. Norman Taylor," replied Miss Harding quietly.

"Do you know—you have seen the newspapers?" asked Norman.

"I have seen the newspapers, Mr. Taylor, I know fully the risk of arrest. But I know that you will not betray me, Mr. Taylor, for, you see, you were there when it all happened."

She spoke sweetly, but there was something in her words that made Norman choke with apprehension. The situation was getting on his nerves. It was a riddle, a puzzle, and he could not understand her.

He looked at her in silence for a few minutes. Beautiful she was, certainly, and more than that, he felt that she was good and loyal and trustworthy. But she was an enigma.

"Why do you say I was there?" he asked.

She shook her head, smiling.

"We won't talk about that," she said. "I have come on a different—a far more important errand. That matter will take care of itself."

"Tell me, do you know anything about the whereabouts of Miss Garden?" asked Norman.

"No more than you," she answered enigmatically. "But let us get to our affair."

"Our affair?"

"Yes, our affair," she answered quietly. "You are puzzled, Mr. Taylor, and you will be more so before I am through. But it is for your good, and you will have to take me a good deal on trust."

"I am quite prepared to do so, Miss Harding," Norman replied gallantly.

His self-possession was returning. This situation was inexplicable, but he determined to see it through and to draw no conclusions in advance.

Girl's Offer of Aid

"I come to you from a—a friend," Miss Harding began.

"A friend? Who?"

"You may not know that now, but I am going to ask you to enter into an agreement with me."

She drew off her gloves and Norman observed a wedding ring on her finger.

"I don't understand what agreement we could possibly enter into, Miss Harding," said Norman.

"Mr. Taylor, there is a large fortune involved. It should have been another's—this friend whose name I cannot give you. He was defrauded of it. Then it should have gone to you, but you were robbed. It is a large sum of money, and, you see, there are two equities in it, yours and the other's.

"Now, if this fortune should be restored to you, would you divide it with the person who should have had it in the first place?"

"I can't understand," said Norman, bewildered.

"Another condition is that your innocence of the Morgan robbery shall be proven before the world."

"Miss Harding, do you mean that?"

"Every word of it," she answered. "I know you are innocent, as well as you know it yourself. And more—I know the guilty persons."

"And this can be proven?"

"Yes, and in addition to this, your present wants will be looked after. I will give you $500 now, and more when you require it."

Norman sank back in his chair, overwhelmed. Miss Harding drew from the leather bag a roll of bills—bills and a document.

"This is as much as I can tell you now," she said, looking at him earnestly. "I restore to you your fortune. I give you back your good name. I enable you to punish those who betrayed you. And I give you this sum of money now as an earnest of my good intentions. All I ask of you is to sign this statement that you will divide this fortune."

"With you?" asked Norman quickly.

"No; with another."

"I don't care about the money. Give me my good name, and you or the other may have it all."

"That will not answer at all, Mr. Taylor. The money must go to you before that other can get any of it, and he can get it then only through you. Do you understand?"

"Frankly, I do not understand. It is an amazing proposition."

"I shall ask you to sign a written obligation to pay to me—for the other—$500,000 at the expiration of two years."

"I can sign that, of course, but paying it will be a different matter."

"You will pay it, Mr. Taylor," said Miss Harding quite seriously. "That sum represents less than half of your fortune. Before two years you will have more than $1,000,000—a good deal more."

"You speak like a prophet, Miss Harding. It seems like an Arabian tale, but I must believe you."

"You may, implicitly. I am telling you the truth."

"You know that I did not commit the Morgan robbery?"

"Yes."

"And you know who did, and who fastened the crime on me?"

"Yes, I know that also."

"Then in heaven's name, tell me," Norman cried.

"Mr. Taylor, I can't tell you now. The matter must be worked out carefully. But you will know in good time. Meanwhile, tell me that you accept my conditions?"

"I do."

"I have your word of honor?"

"Yes, I will sign the paper when you present it to me. I will trust you, but I cannot remain inactive. Tell me something that I can do."

"There is nothing, absolutely nothing, that you can do. You may yet become involved in this affair at Roslyn, but you need not be apprehensive on that score. You must wait."

"For two years?"

"Perhaps. You have waited five."

"I had no choice, then."

Miss Harding arose and placed the $500 in money on a table.

"You must wait now, Mr. Taylor—wait with hope and courage, and all will come right. Now I have finished for the present, and must bid you goodby."

"When shall I see you again?" asked Norman eagerly.

"We shall meet when it is necessary," she replied. "I shall keep in touch with you, although you will not know it. You need have no fears."

She turned and opened the door without another word. Norman heard her light footfall on the stair.

He turned to the table and took up the roll of bills and counted them. Then he thrust them into his pocket.

"I think it is time to look for Ruth," he said, catching up his hat and overcoat and hurrying out into the street.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

NORMAN TAYLOR—A youth who became Fate's toy, and afterward, through woman's love, Fate's master.

RUTH GARDEN—A girl of surpassing loveliness, caught in a web of tragedy, from which love sets her free.

JOHN TARBOE—A Napoleon of criminal schemes, in which men and women are sacrificed to his greed of power, which finally is his undoing.

JAMES GARDEN—An abettor in crime, who repents too late and becomes its victim.

NORA HARDING—A loyal woman, who uses her brains to unravel the knot of Destiny.

BERT HARRIS—A newspaper reporter, born with the hound's keen nose for a trail.

WILFRED DREW—A trusting friend, who does his part to make all happy, in the end, who deserves happiness.

CHAPTER XII.
Wilfred Drew's Wife

THERE is nothing that gives a man's spirits a greater lift than unexpected affluence after distressing poverty. With more than $500 in his pocket Norman was richer than he had ever been in his life. He felt now perfectly able to enter openly into the fight, no matter how powerful the influences arrayed against him.

But his first thought was for Ruth Garden. Drew's connection with the death of her father and his motive in spiriting her away were inexplicable.

Norman abandoned the theory that Drew might have murdered James Garden, and he did not believe that his former friend meant any harm to Ruth.

The circumstances were disquieting, however, and he resolved to take a bold step. He would go to Drew's home in Flushing and learn what had happened to the girl he loved.

Drew's home was at some distance from the street car line which carried Norman through Brooklyn from the Bridge. As he approached the house he observed a number of changes.

The old place had been so thoroughly repaired that it looked almost like a new structure. In place of the old tumbledown frame shanty which was formerly Drew's workshop, there was a tidy brick structure in the rear yard, where the owner evidently indulged his hobby for mechanics. Everything bespoke affluence.

Norman went unhesitatingly up the steps of the house and rang the bell. A trim maid answered the ring.

"Is Mr. Drew at home?" he asked.

"No, sir, but Mrs. Drew is here."

This startling reply almost made Norman lose his self-possession. He had never heard of a Mrs. Drew—never dreamed of his old friend as married. But he was in a headlong mood now, and he said quickly:

"I would like to see Mrs. Drew."

The maid ushered him into the old drawing room, greatly changed and improved since he was last there. He was looking with interest at the pictures, bric-a-brac and delightful furnishings when a girl of Ruth's age, or perhaps a little older, entered. She looked at him inquiringly.

"Is this Mrs. Drew?" asked Norman.

"Yes," she replied. "May I ask——"

Norman gave her no time to probe into his own identity. She was a singularly beautiful girl with serious brown eyes, and her face was sweet and gentle.

"I expected to find your husband," Norman went on hurriedly, interrupting her half-framed question.

"I am sorry that he is out," she said.

"It was not Mr. Drew that I wished especially to see," Norman plunged on. "I came here to see Miss Ruth Garden."

The effect was startling. Young Mrs. Drew's face lost every vestige of color, and she started back. There was fright in her eyes.

Meeting at Drew Home.

"Ruth—Ruth is not here," she said, her voice hardly more than a whisper.

"She came here," Norman persisted, looking steadily at Mrs. Drew. "Where is she?"

"I wish I could tell you," she exclaimed, wildly. "Oh, how I wish I knew where she is."

The honk of a motor horn was heard, and a car whizzed past the window of the drawing room and stopped at the porch. Mrs. Drew gave a glad cry.

"There is my husband," she cried, running to the door. "Will! Will!" she called.

Drew came into the room, throwing aside his ulster and cap. When he saw Norman he gave an exclamation of pleasure, and a smile seemed to chase a haggard, drawn expression from his face.

"Norman, my dear boy, you've come at last!" he cried. "I am glad to see you!"

He shook hands warmly with Norman, while his wife looked on in perplexity.

"You know this gentleman?" she ventured.

"My dear Anna, this is Norman Taylor," Drew cried.

Mrs. Drew stepped forward and shook Norman's hand cordially.

"I have heard all about you, Mr. Taylor," she said gently. "We have expected you here, and your room has been ready for you for a long time."

Norman began to feel ashamed of his suspicions, but he was not yet ready to completely believe in Drew. He was so wrapped around by mystery and strange conspiracies that he could hardly trust himself.

"I am afraid I was abrupt in coming here and frightening Mrs. Drew," he explained.

"I thought you were a detective," said Mrs. Drew, frankly. "Why did you come here asking for Ruth Garden?"

This time Drew looked startled, and turned an inquiring gaze on Norman.

"What about Ruth Garden?" he asked, eagerly.

"I heard that she was here and I came to warn her," said Norman, glibly.

Soloman Grundy—Microscopic Mack;

Or, The Microbic Maggot of Dead Democracy

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal-Examiner

Mr. Mack, of Buffalo, one of the many little nobodies brought to the top of frothy politics, as broken corks are brought to the top of frothy streams, has been talking about himself and his "plans."

You cannot ignore Mr. Mack, of Buffalo. YOU CANNOT IGNORE THE SMALL FLY IN YOUR EYE. But when you get the fly out of your eye, you are glad that that is done.

And when the Democratic party—what is left of it—gets Mr. Mack out of its eye, it will be glad that that is done.

It is very amusing to hear about Mr. Mack's "plans," what he is going to do, what results he is going to achieve.

The microscope for examining human beings of Mack dimensions has not yet been invented. Therefore the intellectual part of a man like Mr. Mack can't be seen. It is too small to be seen. You must judge this gentleman by his achievements, just as you judge a microbe by its achievements, when you study the corpse that the microbe has had for a habitation.

To get an idea of Mr. Mack, the invisible intellect, you must first know by heart the sad story of Soloman Grundy, and then you must look back on the first appearance and first results of microscopic Mack in national politics.

Almost any child knows about poor Soloman Grundy, born on Monday, christened on Tuesday, married on Wednesday, took sick on Thursday, worse on Friday, died on Saturday, buried on Sunday, THAT WAS THE END OF SOLOMAN GRUNDY.

Microscopic Mack is the most earnest and promising competitor of Soloman Grundy. He hasn't done much yet, but this is his first week.

He was appointed chairman, general ruler, pacificator, harmony producer of the Democratic party on a Friday. He collected a doughbag on Saturday. He went to Chicago on a Sunday. He plotted with poor simple-minded Mr. Bryan on a Monday. He acquired an individual named Shepherd on a Tuesday. He left Chicago on Wednesday, having proved the acquired Shepherd to be the kind of thing that you don't mention in serious, solemn editorial columns, and having proved himself a fool.

He also proved some things, by the way, about innocent-minded Mr. Bryan, who doesn't seem to be a very good judge of the American people, either wholesale or retail or microscopic.

Soloman Grundy had his sad finish on a Sunday. Microscopic Mack will have his sad ending on a Tuesday (in November), and on a Wednesday he will be studied among the other microscopic creatures adorning the Democratic corpse.

Do you realize that this microscopic Mack is actually the man put in charge of a party that was once the party of Jefferson and Jackson? Do you realize that this little worthless nobody, a man who would laugh at you if you even pretend to think him serious, earnest or sincere, is in charge of a party that calls itself democratic, and pretends to befriend the people?

Pretty nearly dead is that once strong body the Democratic party, when the only movement visible within it is the movement of these maggot-like Macks, the creatures that move, dominate and possess ONLY WHEN THE REAL LIFE HAS FLED.

The Tale of a Watermelon

By James J. Montague

I.

ROUND inviting watermelon, in the grocery store,
Little Johnny looked at it, then he looked some more.

II.

Grocery man was busy selling maiden lady tea,
Johnny lofted watermelon, murmured softly "Gee!"

III.

Grocery man was making change, lady making talk,
Johnny rolled the watermelon swiftly up the walk.

IV.

Johnny took his trusty knife and gashed the melon's hide,
Licked his chops to see the seeds and bright red meat inside.

V.

Johnny's brother came along, cuffed his freckled ears,
Johnny hastened howling home, weeping wrathful tears.

VI.

Brother took the watermelon underneath a tree,
Ate some fourteen pounds of it, also murmured "Gee!"

VII.

Did he suddenly fall ill? Did the vengeful grocer
Find him there and carry him to the lock-up? No, sir!

VIII.

Did he die a shameful death, as all such wretches must?
No! He did lots more such things, and now he runs a trust!

IX.

And as for Johnny, he is plunged in deep, remorseful grief
Because it was his early fate to be a LITTLE thief!

Little Editorials from the People

FIRST SAW FINDER OF $1,000 KEY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Having been over in the Fenway about every day for a week recently hunting for the hidden key, I had made up mind to hunt thoroughly that corner, but having company, I did not get there early, and when I arrived at the spot, I noticed this man (Mr. Monahan) had knees before he brought the key to the surface that he was the finder. I said to my cousin who was with me, it is no use to look longer, and we started for the car.

A few minutes after I saw the finder again, and waiting for the same car. He came up to me and said: "I have found the key." We could not enter into any conversation, for the poor fellow was very hard of hearing, but he showed me the key and I compared it with the one in the paper I held in my hand, and found it to be the very same. He was trembling with nervousness, shaking with happiness, and tears stood in his eyes, for it seemed to him too good to be true. I know in my own heart from his manner that he had had no help from anyone who knew where the key was hidden.

He turned from us and went toward the car track, but in a few seconds returned and gave me a slip of paper with his name and address, so I was the first to know his name and residence. I have written a letter of congratulation to him, and enclosed the slip he gave me, so he would understand who it was that wrote to him.

Yours, respectfully,
MRS. J. A. WINSBY.

The Still Commoner.

WEX JONES Sub-Editor

Vol. I. Lincoln, Tuesday ——— Aug. 11, 1908. No. 4.

EDITORIAL

Let the people rule.

[At time did at the Denver Convention.]

There is no truth whatever in the report that we intend to appoint Judge Samuel Seabury to the Supreme Court after our election. If he really and sincerely desires the endorsement of the Independence party, of course it would have been different.

"Call me Bill," says Nominee Taft.

Well, he isn't the only William in the Directory.

Don't miss the letter of acceptance which will appear in the Still Commoner. It will contain only 5,300 words, just enough to whet your appetite for more.

And later there will be considerably more.

Our dear friend (for campaign purposes), the editor of the Louisville Curious-Journal, once enlivened an editorial with the couplet:

Things have come to a deuce of a pass
When a man can't wallop his own jackass.

Those are exactly our sentiments regarding the Democratic donkey.

I do not claim any superior virtue for the Democratic party.
—Alton B. Parker.

But then Judge Parker isn't the party's regular candidate.

Get your friends to subscribe for the Still Commoner. Remember, the editor has to make all he can before age forces him out of politics. Don't forget our paper patterns; you may be a Populist, but your wife will want to look like a Plunderbundess.

IF—

Things That Will and Will Not Happen.

If—

If—and it is a very, very small if—we are elected—we might even say, when we are elected—we shall make a number of appointments upon which we have already decided. Some of them will be:

THOMAS TAGGART—Minister to Monaco. (He knows the game.)

THOMAS F. RYAN—Secretary of the Treasury. (As he's got most of the money, this would simplify things.)

HERMAN RIDDER—Envoy to Limberg (at the suggestion of our predecessor).

GEORGE HARVEY—Editor of Congressional Record (an imperceptible change from Harper's Weekly).

Our rates for lectures will be raised another notch.

One of the necessary civil service qualifications will be a subscription to the Still Commoner.

We shall give up the farm. It's an awful strain now, but it appeals to the voters. Sheep and hogs look well in pictures; also the man with the hoe. By the way, is this implement used to bake hoecakes on?

All Chinese and Japanese in the country will be requested to go home. If they refuse, they are sure to die in time, anyway.

To avoid the cost of a navy, the States bordering on the coast line will be abandoned, and we shall then be an inland country, like Switzerland.

All this will happen if—

LETTERS

To the Editor—Mr. Taft has come out with a cry of "making justice cheaper for the poor man."

Why not also come out in favor of "making justice surer for the rich man?"
LABORER.

[This is too risky a subject for us to meddle with. The corporations haven't all dug up yet, you must remember.—Ed.]

To the Editor—What does Colonel Watterson mean when he says, "Bryan will win by a grand swell?"
READER.

[Hanged if we know.—Ed.]

To the Editor—Are you opposed to the Wool Trust's [Sheep have no votes, have they?—Ed.]

To the Editor—If you are elected I hope you will lose no time in creating the Department of Labor.

Guess who would make a good Secretary.

SAMUEL GOMPERS.

[Before we guess, let's see how you carry out your programme of giving me all the labor vote.—Ed.]

To the Editor—Can't you ring me into your speeches now and then? Further, why not have Publicity Promoter Watterson write something about me like that "star-eyed goddess" effort of his?

Outside of Kokomo nobody seems to have heard of me.

Also please suppress the Democratic campaign song:

Bryan's feet and Kern
Is a hundred miles astern.
J. W. KERN.
Kokomo.

To the Editor—I have walloped you as affectionately as Colonel Watterson, so why should you give him a job and not me?
J. PULITZER.

[We haven't jobs enough to supply all our loving enemies.—Ed.]
